Suburb water system to cost $47 million

by LYNN ASINOF

The Northwest suburbs are slated to get future water supplies from an estimated $47 million system that will hook into the existing Chicago system, according to a preliminary consultant's report.

The report, presented to the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission Thursday, was prompted by dwindling ground water supplies in the Chicago suburbs.

It calls for eight separate systems to provide water to the Northeastern Illinois area through the year 2010. Five of those systems rely entirely on Lake Michigan water, and two require construction of new intake facilities in the lake.

The villages of Buffalo Grove and Wheeling are slated to tie into one of these new intake systems which will originate near Highwood on the North Shore and run as far west as Barrington. Serving southern Lake County, it is estimated to cost $33 million. Other area suburbs would link up with Chicago water lines at O'Hare Airport.

THE PLAN, HOWEVER, could not be implemented unless the U.S. Supreme Court revises the formula that limits the diversion of Lake Michigan water.

The state plans to request such a review to change the method of compensating for the water runoff that previously fed into the lake. This would allow enough water to be taken from the lake to serve most of the Chicago suburbs.

"We are optimistic we can reopen the Supreme Court case in the near future," Peter Wise of the Illinois Dept. of Water Resources told the NIPC planning and policy committee.

NIPC officials Thursday stressed that the plan is tentative and requires further study.

Three of the proposed water systems would use water from inland rivers. Two would draw on the Fox River and one would use water from the Kankakee River.

CONSULTANT David Westfall of Keifer and Associates Inc., said that although these rivers are polluted "there is treatment technology to clean up the water sufficiently."

The cost of implementing the entire plan is nearly $455 million, not including improvements required in local water distribution systems.

The Northwest suburban system would connect with Chicago water lines in the O'Hare Airport area. It would require a large water supply reservoir, regional pumping station and a regional water supply pumpline network, including a booster pumping station.

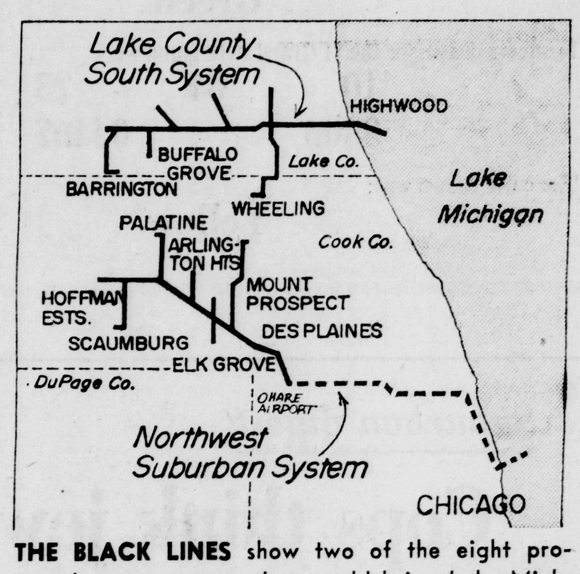

This is similar to a plan developed independently by the eight Northwest suburban communities in SHARE + 3. Cost estimates are comparable for the two plans.

Ten communities would be served by this line, with an estimated daily water demand of 62.2 million gallons by the year 2010.

THE COMMUNITIES served by the proposed O'Hare system would include Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Palatine, Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect.

If the Supreme Court ruling is favorable, Westfall said Lake Michigan water can be available to new users by 1980. Without a favorable ruling, the report states that only 90 cubic feet per second will be available by 1980 and 140 cubic feet per second by 1985.

The details of the plan, including an alternate proposal in case the Supreme Court decision is unfavorable, will be presented to the public at a meeting Feb. 9. The meeting will be at George Williams College, Downers Grove.

THE BLACK LINES show two of the eight proposed water systems that would bring Lake Michigan water to the suburbs.

WILSON SCHOOL, 15 E. Palatine Rd., Arlington Heights, is one of the schools being considered for closing by the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education because of declining enrollment. Four junior high schools also are being considered for closing.

Decision to shut Dist. 25 schools due in March

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

By March, the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education will have to decide whether to close schools to cope with a projected continuing decline in enrollment, Board Pres. Joan Klussmann said Thursday.

"We'll have to strike the best balance between our educational program and finances for the district's taxpayers and children," she told about 50 persons attending Thursday night's board meeting.

Faced with projections for a 41 per cent enrollment decline by 1986 and a $500,000 budget deficit by 1978-79, administrators and board members agree that school closings must be given "serious consideration."

DESPITE VOTER approval of a May referendum increasing taxes by 52 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation, the magnitude of the declining enrollment problem is such that the tax increases will not keep the district afloat, Supt. Donald Strong said.

The board now is looking at plans for closing either one junior high school and one elementary school and maintaining the current grade level organization, or closing two junior highs and placing kindergarten through sixth grade students in elementary school and seventh and eighth grade students in junior high.

Closing two junior highs could save the district in the first year about

Two illegal aliens arrested here

Arlington Heights police arrested two illegal aliens late Wednesday night who they said are suspected of being members of a robbery ring.

Police said they arrested Yan Ming Wei, 21, of Manteno, and Paul Law, 18, of Chicago, after a car chase down Northwest Highway at 11:29 p.m. Wednesday.

Police said they believe the pair is part of the 100-member "Black Ghost Shadows" organization, which allegedly commits armed robberies against Chinese-American businesses in the Chicago area.

THE PAIR REPORTEDLY was cruising around a Chinese restaurant in Arlington Heights in a car which was missing its front license plate and had a rear license plate bent so that the plate was unreadable.

Employes of the restaurant became suspicious and called police. A police cruiser began to follow Wei's auto at Northwest Highway near Dunton Avenue and tried to stop the car, police said.

However, Wei allegedly tried to elude the police car and was stopped after other Arlington Heights patrol units surrounded Wei's auto at Northwest Highway and Belmont Avenue.

Police searched the auto and recovered five 20-gauge shotgun shells, four .38-caliber special shells, and one .32-caliber shell. Police charged Wei and Law for possession of unlawful ammunition, and charged Wei for traffic violations.

Charges against the pair later were set aside, and the men were turned over to U.S. Immigration officials for processing and possible deportation.

NI-Gas customers won't get cold

A Northern Illinois Gas Co. representative Thursday said the company has enough gas to meet its customers' needs, despite a record-breaking demand brought on by the coldest Chicago area winter in 104 years.

Intervention by the federal government could disrupt the gas supplies, the representative said. But such government intervention now is not expected.

"From time to time there have been suggestions that the federal government ought to take gas from the have's and give it to the have nots," said company representative Bob Kearby.

"This is something we have consistently opposed," he said.

IN WASHINGTON, D.C., the Federal Power Commission Thursday listened to predictions that schools will close, thousands will be thrown out of work and the public health will be threatened unless emergency sales of natural gas are allowed.

The gas industry is seeking permission to buy gas from intrastate pipeline companies at prices higher than the interstate rates set by the FPC.

Gas companies have sought permission for such emergency sales before but Thursday's testimony took on new urgency because of colder than normal winter temperatures that have prevailed across the nation.

"At stake are tens of thousands of jobs, health care services and continued operations of schools," said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. "The very health and welfare of our state and its people are imperiled."

NI-Gas does not oppose intrastate emergency gas sales, Kearby said. But it would object if it were forced to give up some of its gas reserves to other companies.

PEOPLES GAS LIGHT and Coke Co., Chicago, announced this week that it was curtailing gas shipments to three big users for at least a week. The cutbacks are in accord with Peoples' contract with the three companies — U.S. Steel Corp., Republican Steel Corp. and Western Electric Co.'s Hawthorne Works. The firms have alternative fuels.

Kearby said NI-Gas contracts do not permit the temporary interruption of gas deliveries because of possible shortages.

The firm set a new company record for gas delivery between noon Monday and noon Wednesday when it recorded the use of 6.85 billion cubic feet of gas.

"We are designed so that we would be able to meet customers' needs for two abnormally cold heating seasons," Kearby said. "Although the weather we've been having lately is sure testing it."

A WEEK AGO the company announced gas heating bills for the months of November and December may be as much as 50 per cent higher than for the same months a year ago because of the below average temperaturss.

"We said then that if temperatures returned to the normal the bills would come down some. But so far in January temperatures have been 31 per cent colder than normal," Kearby said.

Weather records show that average monthly temperatures this winter make 1976 the coldest winter in Chicago since 1872.

Snow skips here, but cold lingers

Threats of a big snow storm again abated with little more than a flurry Thursday in the Chicago area, while central and Southern Illinois bore the brunt of winter's fury.

The National Weather Service has forecasted snow or snow flurries for today, with a high temperature in the upper teens or lower 20s and a low between 5 and 10 above tonight. Brisk, cold, northerly winds at 15 to 20 miles per hour are expected.

Snow Thursday again clobbered downstate communities, dumping between two and four inches of new snow on the 13-inches that already had fallen on the normally snow-free southern portion of the state.

Sub freezing temperatures hampered travel on the Mississippi River south of St. Louis, where the U.S. Coast Guard recommended closing the 180 miles of river south to Cairo because of ice.

SEVEN TOWS WERE reported icebound between St. Louis and Cairo. A tow boat reportedly ran aground four miles south of Grant Tower in Southern Illinois, and ice broke loose some of its 14 barges loaded with grain or steel. One barge sank and another carrying sheet steel still was missing Thursday afternoon.

Because of the runaway barge, the Coast Guard closed a 20-mile stretch of river above Cairo.

Even Lake Michigan was expected to freeze completely because of the bitter cold. A forecaster in Milwaukee predicted the lake probably will freeze from shore to shore for the first time since 1963 and only the third time in 60 years.

Weather-related deaths continued to mount in Illinois, reaching 17 after two women were killed Thursday when their car slipped on U.S. Rte. 51 near El Paso and slammed head-on into a semi-trailer truck.

A 12-year-old Peoria boy died of injuries he suffered when his father, who was carrying the youth, slipped on ice and fell Thursday. The youth, Lee McNaught, was a rheumatoid arthritis victim.

Defiant bishop plans rival church

ROME (UPI) — A renegade French Roman Catholic bishop has bought control of more than 200 Swiss companies and is planning to build a rival basilica to the Vatican with U. S. and European donations, the magazine L'Europeo said Thursday.

The Italian magazine said conservataive French Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, stripped of his priestly duties by Pope Paul VI last July for saying a banned Latin mass, has established an "antichurch" with broad financial backing.

"With money from his American, German, Swiss, French and Italian benefactors, Lefebvre and his straw men have been in a position to set up or control more than 200 financial companies in Switzerland and buy abandoned monasteries, seminaries with surrounding land, deserted church property and garages to be turned into chapels," the magazine said.

"A basilica is being built in Econe, Lefebvre's Swiss fief, as a rival to the Vatican," L'Europeo said.

WITHOUT QUOTING sources, it said a number of businessmen were switching support from the Vatican to Lefebvre.

At the same time, L'Europeo said, Lefebvre "has given his antichurch a financial structure and economic power."

The Vatican had no immediate comment on the story.

Lefebvre has accused Pope Paul VI of being a heretic and making concessions to communists.

The magazine said fear of losing more financial support was the main reason why Pope Paul so far has not excommunicated Lefebvre from the Roman Catholic Church "although all theological and juridical conditions exist" for such a step.

MSU invents slow-melting ice cream

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — The home of chocolate cheese, Michigan State University, is boasting a new invention: slow-melting ice cream.

Researchers say the new fangled treat may have the added benefit of fewer calories.

MSU students and other local residents put the new ice cream to the taste test and agreed that it is as good, if not better, than the quick-melting variety.

INVENTING SUPER snacks is nothing new at MSU, which has large dairy and food science schools. Several years ago, researchers invented a peculiar item called chocolate cheese, a sort of cross between cheese and fudge.

The difference between slow-melting ice cream and the traditional kind lies in the emulsion content and stabilizing system, said Prof. Romesh C. Chandan.

These two components are responsible for ice cream's fluffy, ice texture. Put together differently and added to regular ingredients, they slow down the melting rate.

It normally takes between 10 and 20 minutes for a cone to melt at room temperature. The slow-melting takes from 20 to 40 minutes, Chandan said.

Only part of the ice cream project is completed. The researchers are now studying dry whey, a cheese byproduct, and the conversion of milk sugar.

Milk sugar normally constitutes 20 per cent of the milk in ice cream, while dry whey contains 73 per cent of milk sugar. This could replace sugar cane and reduce the calorie count by 30 to 35 per cent, Chandan said.

Cops think jewel theft was planned

Police believe a Wednesday morning armed robbery of the Comfort King Heating and Air Conditioning office in Elk Grove Township was prepared and the four robbers knew an employe would be wearing expensive jewelry. Lt. Frank Braun, Cook County Sheriff's Police, said the four robbers first tied up Comfort King employe Robert Brenner, then waited for a half hour until employe Diane Markgraf arrived at the office, 1500 E. Algonquin Rd. The robbers stole from Mrs. Markgraf three rings and a custom-made watch, all valued at $20,000. Mrs. Markgraf, 31, is the wife of Comfort King owner Robert Markgraf.

Maryville dorms under guard

Empty dormitories at Maryville Academy, 1950 N. River Rd., Des Plaines are being guarded this week by maintenance crews to prevent arson attacks. Des Plaines Fire Chief Donald Corey said he is sure the fire, which broke out last Friday in an abandoned boys' dormitory, was set by arsonists. The two dormitories, scheduled to be demolished this week are susceptible to possible arson attacks because no one normally is around to watch the property, Corey said. The fire last week was answered by fire departments from nine area communities who battled the blaze for more than seven hours.

Grand Spaulding under inquiry

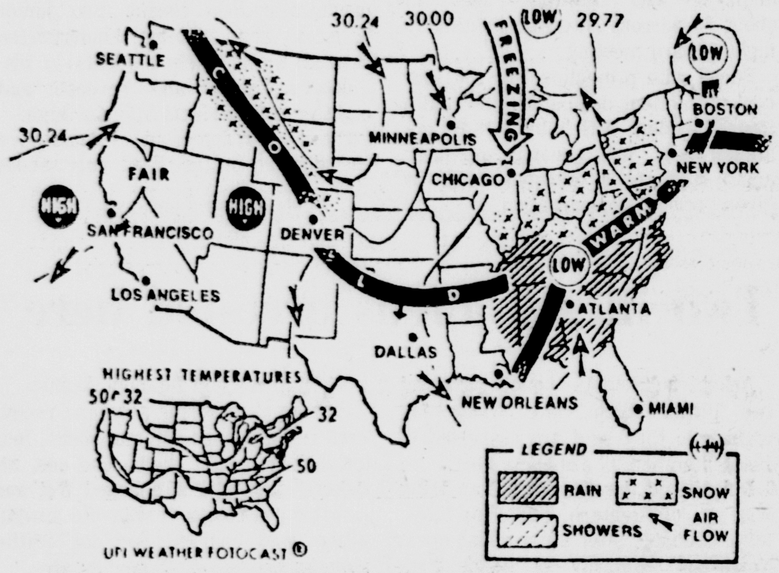

An investigation by Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott into Chicago area auto dealership operations, including Grand Spaulding Dodge, 3301 W. Grand Ave., Chicago, does not involve Grand Spaulding's Buffalo Grove branch, 935 W. Dundee Rd. Donald G. Mulack, head of the consumer protection division of the attorney general's office, said the Spaulding dealership in Chicago is among six in the area being investigated. Records of Grand Spaulding's Chicago dealership and two other dealerships have been subpoenaed. Mulack said the investigation is not alleging fraud but is aimed at determining how personnel are supervised and trained, and how consumer complaints are handled by the dealers.

Frozen water line problems meeting topic

by JOE FRANZ

Public works representatives from 10 Northwest suburban municipalities met Thursday to discuss possible action in case of a frozen water lines crisis.

David L. Creamer, Mount Prospect director of public works, said an emergency meeting of the members of the Northwest Municipal Conference was called because many water lines have frozen in the last few days as a result of the frigid temperatures.

Service to some homes has been cut off, he said, because some longer water lines under streets have frozen.

"Some of the towns are having some problems," Creamer said. "It isn't at a crisis stage at this point, but you never know when the situation is going to get worse."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS has had about 15 frozen water lines as a result of the recent cold snap, more than any of the other municipalities represented at the meeting.

Park Ridge has had 10 frozen water lines, Mount Prospect, two and Buffalo Grove, one.

Other municipalities represented at the meeting were Des Plaines, Wheeling, Elk Grove Village, Rolling Meadows, Palatine and Schaumburg.

Creamer said if the situation becomes critical, the cities and villages that are members of the conference will use five, high aperage welders in the area on a cooperative basis to thaw frozen water lines.

IF THERE ARE not enough of the welders to go around, he said the conference will apply for emergency federal aid to purchase more equipment.

"The purpose of the meeting today was to let everyone know that there could be a problem," he said. "If the situation becomes critical, members of the conference will get together to try to solve it."

All representatives at the meeting were asked to inform their mayors and Civil Defense directors of the frozen water lines problem so that quick action can be taken if a crisis develops.

Creamer saaid the water lines have frozen in some areas because the frost line has dropped to as low as 50 inches in some places.

"At this point it seems that most of the problems are in places where water lines are shallower than they should be," he said. "The lines should be 4½ to 5% feet down, but in some places they just aren't that low."

AS REPRESENTATIVES from suburban municipalities met to discuss possible action in case of frozen water lines, the problem became acute in Milwaukee. Here, a Milwaukee Public Works crew chief listens to pipe in attempt to track down a gusher. He found it and the excavation began.

Baffling object still inside pond

WAKEFIELD, N.H. (UPI) — The frozen pond behind William McCarthy's house turned to slush in subfreezing weather Monday, but Gov. Meldrim Thomson Thursday dismissed reports a radioactive object hurtling from the skies was to blame.

"We know some object dropped into the farmer's pond," said Col. Leon Parker of the state adjutant general's office. But nobody knew exactly what. In fact, no one could find anyone who said he actually saw something fall into the pond.

Thomson said initial reports that the mysterious "object" thought to be in the pond was radioactive arose from the faulty reading of a geiger counter.

AND AN OBJECT reported seen under the water in the pond, Thomson said, merely was a shadow produced by cracked ice on the pond's surface.

"Examination of the pond revealed no object," Thomson said after receiving an on-the-scene report from Asst. Atty. Gen. Gregory Smith.

State authorities investigating the reports sawed two holes through the ice Thursday and placed sample material into clear plastic bags.

New Hampshire Deputy Atty. Gen. Thomas Rath said officials took "rock and soil samples off the floor of the pond and that is it," but he said he didn't know what they were testing for or how long the test would take.

The samples were taken by state public health authorities to the state laboratory for examination.

The strange story began Monday as the McCarthys, who raise saddle horses outside this township of 1,400 were looking through the sliding glass doors in their kitchen toward the 150-foot-long, solidly frozen pond about 1:30 p.m.

"THE WHOLE POND started to melt and it was five degrees," said their son, Thomas McCarthy, 26, who lives nearby.

"There was a hole right in the ice. The first day it was 16 or 18 inches across. The whole pond turned to slush. There was another small hole 50 feet away, linked by a crack in the ice," he said.

Both holes had frozen over again by Thursday.

Town police were called, and McCarthy said they brought up a geiger counter from the local Civil Defense unit.

"I don't know. It registered enough to get them going," McCarthy said.

Between Tuesday and Thursday scores of state officials had scoured the area, using saws to hack away the ice crust. When they left, the mystery — at least the mystery of the ice that melted in midwinter — remained.

TV stations may film executions

NEW YORK (UPI) — All three television networks said Thursday they will cover executions if allowed to do so, but CBS and NBC will not show the death penalty being carried out either live or on the evening news.

ABC has not decided what use it would make of such film.

Richard S. Salant, president of CBS News, said "while we contend we have the right to be present if the rest of the press is, we have no intention of using any film we might shoot at or about the time of the execution and at most we would put it in our library for possible future use — far in the future — as part of history."

A CBS News official said "If the print press has access to an execution, we believe we have the same rights. But you will not see it on the Evening News with Walter Cronkite."

NBC'S POSITION was essentially the same. Both networks noted the possibility of including execution footage some time in the future in a documentary on capital punishment.

Mark Landsman, director of editorial assignments at NBC, noted that John Chancellor had already said on the air that his evening news program would not include execution footage and added, "We would not want any on-the-air use."

William Sheehan, president of ABC News, said, "Of course, we would cover an execution, but that is not to say we would broadcast it. To me personally, the idea is repulsive . . ."

The press is barred by state law from covering the Utah execution of Gary Gilmore, scheduled for Jan. 17. A judge in Texas said the broadcast press has the same rights as the print press to cover the execution of Jerry Lane Jurek, scheduled for Jan. 19.

Panel OKs Brown in defense post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary-designate Harold Brown won unanimous approval by a Senate committee Thursday. Griffin Bell's nomination for attorney general was criticized by blacks but he gained support from a former Watergate prosecutor.

The Senate Finance Committee started proceedings on Joseph Califano's nomination to head HEW — aside from Bell's the only Carter choice yet to draw criticism.

Labor Secretary-designate F. Ray Marshall, a University of Texas professor, went before the Senate Labor Committee, where he expressed the view that Jimmy Carter's economic proposals are too limited, particularly in creating new jobs.

BROWN, A FORMER secretary of the Air Force, was the second Carter cabinet nominee to win preliminary approval as the committees laid groundwork for quick confirmation by the full Senate after Carter is sworn in as president one week from now.

The appointment of Rep. Bob Bergland, D-Minn., to head the Agriculture Dept. already had zipped through the Agriculture Committee without a hint of opposition.

The Armed Services Committee also gave unanimous approval of Charles W. Duncan, a former president of Coca-Cola Corp., to be Brown's deputy at the Pentagon.

AT THE SENATE Judiciary Committee, spokesmen for civil rights groups continued to criticize the appointment of Bell, the former federal appeals court judge from Atlanta.

But former Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski told the panel Thursday that Bell is "thoroughly qualified" to head the Justice Department, and "I would be shocked if this man ever yielded to pressure."

Another witness, former president Joseph Rauh of Americans for Democratic Action, sharply criticized the appointment, saying: "For at least 14 years as a lawyer and judge, Griffin Bell gave aid and comfort to the segregationists of the nation."

Califano, the Washington lawyer and former Lyndon Johnson aide, met close questioning by members of the Finance Committee concerning his opposition to abortions and his legal representation of four corporations in which HEW "has a significant interest."

ONE OF THE companies, Velsicol Chemical Corp., is being investigated for possible pesticide poisoning of its employes.

Califano told the panel "I personally believe that abortion is wrong," but that this will not interfere with his carrying out laws which provide federal subsidies for abortions.

Carter, chiefs of staff talk about limiting arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter spent much of Thursday with the Joint Chiefs of Staff discussing strategic arms limitation and U.S. military ability to meet a Soviet threat.

He broke away from the talks long enough to chat on the telephone for 10 to 15 minutes each with British Prime Minister James Callaghan, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

Carter, flanked by his top advisers on national security, went through a four-hour briefing from the service chiefs at Blair House during the morning, then continued the discussions in an unscheduled afternoon session.

While the chiefs and his advisers adjourned to a dining room for lunch, Carter continued a series of phone calls started the night before to foreign leaders whom Vice President-elect Walter Mondale will visit shortly after the inauguration.

A SPOKESMAN for Callaghan said the two leaders agreed on a visit to Washington by the prime minister soon, but set no date. A French spokesman said Giscard and Carter had a "cordial" talk and that the French release of a Palestinian guerrilla leader did not come up. A West German spokesman said Carter and Schmidt talked about 15 minutes on "questions of general interest."

The British and French spokesman said the need for an economic summit wa discussed in their leaders' conversation with Carter.

Carter spoke by phone with Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda Wednesday.

A discussion of the Strategic Arms Limitations talks followed briefings on U.S. military deployments and capabilities. Powell said Carter carried the sessions over into the afternoon because he did not have time to cover all subjects he wanted to discuss with the military leaders during the morning.

Pentagon sources said the chiefs entered the session prepared for a complete rundown of the military situation, including their assessment of the Soviet threat. Some recent intelligence estimates have judged the Russians to be seeking decisive strategic superiority over the United States.

THE CHIEFS, headed by Air Force Gen. George S. Brown as chairman, and other Pentagon officials are believed to have taken a harder line on SALT than Sec. of State Henry Kissinger.

The split has led to reported disagreements within the government on how much the United States should give up to the Soviet Union in negotiations for a SALT II agreement to follow the interim treaty which expires in October.

Carter has said he would put top priority on achieving an agreement and also that he favors a "freeze" on new or improved weapons by either side.

The talks have been stalled for more than a year.

Mondale participated in the session with the Joint Chiefs, along with Sec. of State designate Cyrus Vance, Sec. of Defense designate Harold Brown, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and CIA Director-designate Theodore Sorenson.

Participating in the military briefing with Brown were Army Gen. Bernard Rogers, Air Force Gen. David C. Jones, Adm. James L. Holloway III and Marine Gen. Louis Wilson.

Carter started the day in a breakfast session with retiring Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss and former Gov. Ken Curtis of Maine, whom the president-elect has named as his choice to run the party's national committee.

Playboy's claim of royal love affair called outrage

• A Palace spokesman in Monte Carlo Thursday branded a Brazilian playboy's claims of a love affair with Princess Caroline and his intimations she is no longer a virgin "an outrage." He said the royal family has never met the millionaire. Lawyers for Prince Rainier of Monaco filed criminal and civil suits in Sao Paulo, Brazil, Wednesday charging Francisco "Chiquinho" Scarpa had defamed the 19-year-old princess. A spokesman for the Royal Family Thursday said the princess has not even met Scarpa. In an Oct. 10 interview, Scarpa listed Caroline as among the women with whom he has had amorous relations.

• First Lady Betty Ford has no regrets at having spoken out on everything from the Equal Rights Amendment to the possibility of her daughter having an affair. Talking with reporters Wednesday after a reception at the American Newspaper Womens Club, Mrs. Ford was asked whether she would do anything differently, given another chance. "No," she said. "I don't believe I would have because I actually said to my husband 'well if we are put in this position where we have to assume this responsibility, the public will have to accept me as I am because I am too old to change.' I think they accepted me as I have been always."

• Robert Adler of Minneapolis drove his 98-cent car into the driveway of his modest home and came in from the cold to a tub filled with the hottest water he could stand. The 32-year-old painter and decorator just won a 1968 Chevrolet Bellaire with most of the extras by sitting in the car for 54 hours from 6 a.m. Monday to noon Wednesday in temperatures that plunged to 29 degrees below zero. Adler said if he ever decides to sit in a car again for that length of time it will "be in Florida."

• The Ohio Edison Co. Thursday said it had "no choice" but to turn off the electricity at the home of a 74-year-old man who later froze to death. He owed the electric company $18.38. Police said when the body of Eugene Kuhn was found Monday, the temperature inside his home was 9 degrees. He had not paid his bill in six months. Kuhn, a retired Westinghouse employe, was hospitalized Oct. 4 with a stroke. He returned to his home, where he lived alone, after his hospitalization. Company policy is not to disconnect any customer for 60 days. Kuhn had not made a payment since September.

Blood center catches up with area shortage

The North Suburban Blood Center, Northbrook, said Thursday it has caught up with area hospitals' blood needs after a near crisis-level shortage.

The blood bank issued pleas for donors last week and requested hospitals to postpone elective surgery whenever possible. The blood bank was short of blood because it had been unable to find enough donors during the long Christmas and New Year's weekends.

"We are stable at the moment, although we've still got nothing to spare," said Marjorie Lepman, director of donor education at North Suburban Blood Center.

"People have come forward just beautifully since our call for donors," she said.

North Suburban Blood Center supplies blood to 10 hospitals in the North and Northwest suburbs.

$2 billion education budget approved

The Illinois Board of Education Thursday approved a tentative budget of nearly $2 billion for the 1977-78 school year. The board's budget request is a $238 million increase over this year's budget. The tentative budget for elementary and secondary education represents full funding for the state-aid formula to public schools. The board's action came despite warnings from Gov. James R. Thompson that new spending for all state agencies must be held to $300 million in the 1978 fiscal year to avoid a tax hike or bankruptcy.

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin last month said if the state does not fully fund the school aid formula, Illinois public schools will be headed toward more program cuts, teacher layoffs and increases in class size in the next school year.

Saturday named Dr. King day

Gov. James R. Thompson signed his first proclamation as governor Thursday, declaring Saturday as Dr. Martin Luther King Day. He also announced today would be a state holiday. Thompson said he would send a copy of the proclamation to the widow of the late Dr. King, Coretta King.

State traffic deaths drop 1%

Traffic fatalities in Illinois showed a slight decrease in 1976 over the previous year, the Dept. of Transportation and the Illinois State Police reported Thursday. The agencies said during 1976 there were 2,042 deaths on Illinois roads, a decrease of 1 per cent from the 2,062 deaths in 1975. They said preliminary reports also indicated the number of vehicle miles driven in Illinois last year increased about 5 per cent from the 60.7 billion miles in 1975.

More minority firemen for city

A court battle over the hiring of Chicago firefighters was resolved in U. S. District Court Thursday when the city agreed to hire 274 firefighters, including 40 with Spanish surnames and 168 blacks. Judge Thomas R. McMillan approved the agreement and also ordered the city to comply in the future with a 1974 agreement that 50 per cent of the new firefighters be members of minority groups.

The agreement was reached in a suit filed by the U. S. Justice Dept. in 1973, charging the city discriminated against minority firefighters in hiring and promotion. In a three-page order, McMillan ordered the city to hire the first 137 firefighters by Feb. 7 and another group of 137 by April 18. Because of the federal suit, Chicago has not hired any new firefighters for three years.

Mayoral election June 7

Chicagoans will go to the polls June 7 to elect a successor to the late Mayor Richard J. Daley, the Chicago City Council decided Thursday. A primary election will be held April 19 and nominating petitions for the special mayoral election must be filed between Feb. 9 and Feb. 19, the council decided.

The mayor elected June 7 will serve out the remainder of Daley's term, which ends in 1979. Daley died Dec. 20 from a heart attack and Ald. Michael Bilandic was elected by the council to serve as acting mayor pending new elections.

Firm gets huge break on credit

A Chicago speculator received a half million dollars in credit from the U. S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development to finance the purchase of scores of abandoned homes, it was learned Thursday. The Metropolitan Area Housing Alliance and UPI disclosed last fall that the firm, Conteco Inc., has made cosmetic repairs on the homes and then sold them for big profits, often more than double the purchase prices.

The preferential treatment for Conteco was revealed in an Oct. 8 letter from company Pres. Theodore Bruck to a HUD official. Bruck's letter, obtained by MAHA and released Thursday, requested a two-month extension of a deadline for completing payments on 63 of 174 abandoned homes which Conteco purchased at auctions last spring.

Under HUD guidelines, speculators who buy the homes at the auctions may place a $500 deposit but must pay the full price within 30 days. Conteco, which bought the homes for prices ranging from $1,500 to $14,000, owed HUD $447,000 for the 63 homes. A MAHA spokesman said: "It would appear Conteco is being allowed to outbid other purchasers with no money to back it up."

Birkholz new Harper College V.P.

John Birkholz, vice president of academic affairs at Harper College, Thursday was named executive vice president of Harper.

He will assume his new post July 1.

The appointment of Birkholz came after protests from the Harper Student Senate President, and student board of trustee members about the lack of student opinion in selecting the executive vice president.

Birkholz, 43, was the only applicant for the position, said Wilfred VonMayr, director of personnel. Birkholz has served as a faculty member, division chairman, dean and has been vice president at Harper since 1967.

The job of executive vice president was created last month by the board of trustees to manage instructional, student and personnel services at Harper in preparation for expansion to a second campus. Harper's main campus is in Palatine and a second campus is planned in Wheeling Township.

THE BOARD approved Birkholz's appointment in a 6 to 1 vote with Board Pres. Shirley Munson casting the only dissenting vote.

Mrs. Munson said she opposed the selection of Birkholz for the same reason she voted against the establishment of the executive vice president position last month.

Mrs. Munson said it was premature to expand the college's administration in preparation for a second campus when plans for that campus are not firm.

Student Senate Pres. Paul Scott asked the board why a committee with student and faculty members was not included in the selection process for the new vice president.

"We are concerned that students have been omitted from this process," Scott said.

He said students also were surprised that a selection was made within one month after the job was created.

COLLEGE PRES. Robert Lahti said students and faculty were not involved in the selection process because the executive vice president would not be a direct supervisor of either group.

"In those positions in which students or faculty have a direct working relationship, they should be much more concerned," Lahti said.

When questioned why the college did not seek applicants from outside of Harper, Lahti said there was no reason "to go through a prolonged search, when without question we may have the most qualified person here."

VonMayr said notice of the job opening was circulated to all Harper staff members.

No salary was established for Birkholz' new job. When the position was created, however, college officials said the salary range would be less than that of the college president but higher than that of the other college vice presidents.

Birkholz has served as vice president of academic affairs at Harper since 1973. Before becoming a vice president, he was dean of transfer programs and chairman of the division of business and social science.

A DISMANTLED 1932 Dodge is lowered slowly into a tank to have its paint removed at Ropo Metal Stripping, which was opened two months ago at 2916 Malmo Dr. by John A. Gross, right, and Don Szontagh.

New process makes care easy

They're real strippers— of rust on old cars, that is

by BILL HILL

When John Gross and Don Szontagh began collecting antique automobiles 11 years ago, they quickly discovered why so many others have abandoned the hobby.

Rust.

It's a tedious process stripping paint and rust from automobiles by hand. It takes tons of elbow grease, gallons of paint remover and more steel wool than you'd need to knit your own Model T.

A single fender can take 50 hours of labor. John and Don spent a year of weekends and evenings working on one car body and they still couldn't remove all the rust.

BUT NOW THEIR problems are solved, and other antique car owners also can benefit.

The long and wearisome project is reduced to about four days (and no scrubbing) by a new process developed by Auto Strippers and Restorers of Cambria, Wis. John and Don are affiliated with the company. Their company, Ropo Metal Stripping, is at 2916 Malmo Dr., Arlington Heights.

Gross, an industrial arts teacher in Skokie, describes the two-month-old company as a hobby that beame a business. It's a family enterprise that also involves their wives, Mary Ellen Szontagh and Ellen Gross. Both families live in Des Plaines.

The process involves dunking sections of dismantled cars into two large tanks filled with special chemicals, the mixture of which John and Don don't even know. The metal parts are dipped, washed and redipped in the paint-stripping tank until all layers of paint are removed. Then a dipping in an adjacent tank removes any rust. A final dunk occurs in the first tank where a rust inhibitor is applied.

THE TOTAL TIME needed for the process depends on the kind of paint and number of layers. The cost also varies. A complete car will cost $500-$600, Gross estimated.

The process has passed all environmental regulations, he said.

"The nice thing about this process, as opposed to others, is that it doesn't destroy the wood, and most of the old cars are just full of wood," Gross said.

"The liquid also hits every possible spot there may be rust, including areas you can't reach by hand," he said.

Dist. 21's Crise won't run again

by DIANE GRANAT

Jeremiah Crise, Wheeling Township Dist. 21 Board of Education member, has decided not to seek a fourth term in the April 9 school board election.

Incumbent Winfield Boyer, however, said he will enter the board race.

Crise, who has served on the board for nine years, said he will not run for another three-year seat when his term expires in April because he does not have the time.

"I am working on a master's degree in accounting that is requiring an awful lot of my free time," said Crise, 611 W. Hintz Rd., Arlington Heights.

Boyer, 1801 Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect, was appointed to the board last July to fill the unexpired term of Jack Lane, who resigned. He was selected by the board from among seven candidates.

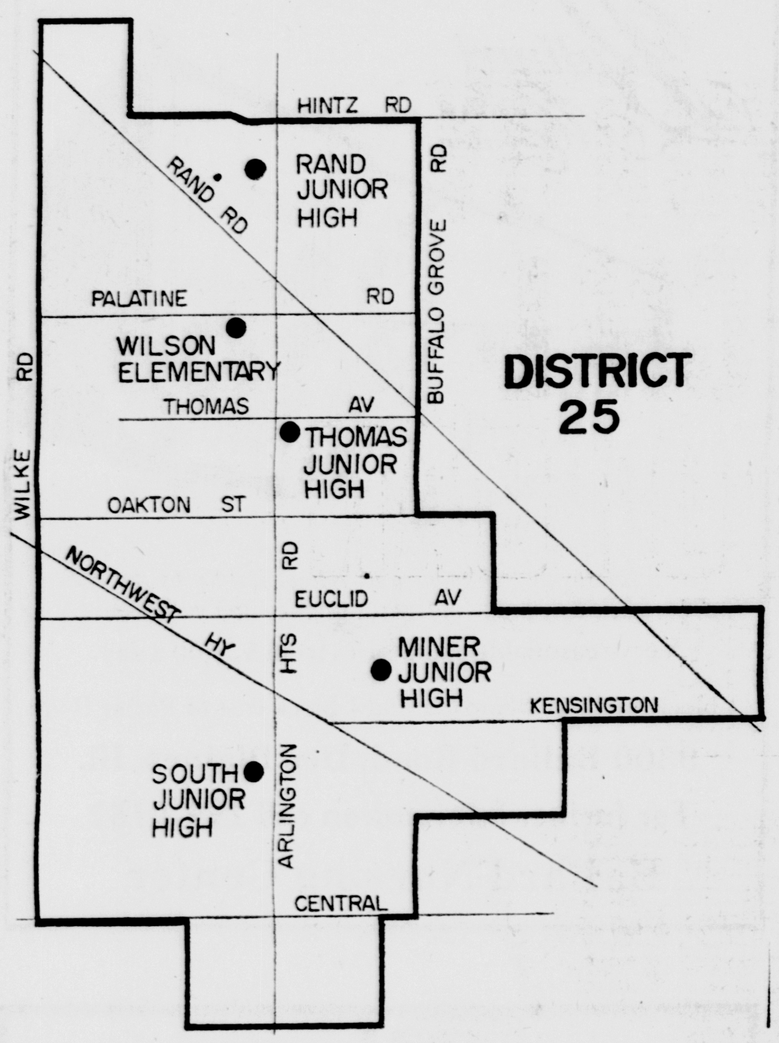

"I feel it's time to pursue the public support and continue the job which I've just started," Boyer said. Boyer said he will seek the endorsement of Dist. 21's General Caucus.

THE CAUCUS screening committee Saturday will begin interviewing candidates seeking endorsement for the two vacancies in the April election.

The committee will interview candidates beginning at 9:15 a.m. at the administration building 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling. Candidates seeking caucus support should contact Adrianne Rotfeld, 398-0476 during the day or Hal Linn, 537-6649 at night, to arrange an appointment.

After interviewing candidates, the screening committee will present information about the candidates and recommendations for endorsement to the general caucus members. The caucus is an independent citizens group with representatives from civic and school organizations in Dist. 21.

A candidate for the school board must be at least 18 years old, a resident of the district for one year and a registered voter. Caucus endorsement is not necessary to be a candidate.

FOUR JUNIOR high schools and one elementary school are involved in plans being considered by the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education for possible school closings because of declining enrollment.

Dist. 25 to decide school closings

$113,400 more than closing one elementary school and one junior high, said Gerald Williams, director of administration and planning. In either plan though, depending on the schools closed, the necessity for increased busing of students could cut into expected savings by as much as $22,500, he said.

CLOSING TWO junior highs would save the district $372,100 in salaries and operational costs in the first year, even with a $50,000 expense for altering the current grade level organization and putting sixth graders into the elementary schools, Williams said. Closing one elementary school and one junior high would save $258,700 in salaries and operational costs in the first year, he said.

"Closing two junior highs is an educational program quality question as well as a dollars question," Strong said.

The district's present grade level organization offers students earlier exposure to specially trained teachers and specialized facilities and a more extensive program for extra-curricular activities based upon the larger number of students in a sixth through eighth grade school, Williams said.

On the other hand, putting sixth graders in elementary schools would give them an additional year in a smaller, more intimate environment; an opportunity to continue special programs such as the gifted program with the same staff; an increased opportunity for leadership experience; and an additional year to mature before entering junior high, he said.

STATISTICALLY, either plan would be workable. If the board opted to close two junior highs, Oakton Street would make a logical dividing line and would allow for a north and south junior high, each with an enrollment of about 900, Williams said.

If the board chose to close one junior high and one elementary school, Wilson School, 15 E. Palatine Rd., would be an easy elementary school to close, he said.

Graham won't decide to quit parks till April

Kathryn Graham, a village board candidate, will make no decision on whether to resign her Arlington Heights Park District board seat until after the April 19 village election.

"I refuse to give up the (park board) seat now," she said, "because if I lose the trustee election I might not have anything left to do. I'll make a decision after the election. I just don't think that far ahead."

Mrs. Graham was elected park commissioner in 1973. Her current term expires in 1979.

SHE SAID SHE hasn't decided whether serving on the village and park boards simultaneously would be a conflict of interest.

"It's a question I cannot face at this time. I'll cross that bridge when I come to it," she said. "It's mostly a physical thing with me. I have to wait and see how much physical stamina I have if I'm able to serve on both.

"At this point my first and only concern is to get 600 names on a petition to get on the April ballot," Mrs. Graham said.

HER MANY MINORITY votes on the park board were "getting monotonous," she said, and they prompted her to run for trustee. "But I don't want anyone to think that because I'm running for trustee I care any less about the park district," she said.

If she loses her bid for a village board seat she will keep her park commission post.

"If I'm not elected I'll go right on doing what I'm doing now. I have two years left on the park board and can try again for trustee then if I'm not elected this time. At least I'll still have something to do."

Agents buy drugs, arrest 2 men

Undercover agents in Arlington Heights Wednesday night bought $3,600 in illicit drugs, and then arrested the two suburban men who allegedly sold them the narcotics.

Police said they arrested Frank P. Klupta, 21, of Norridge, who allegedly arranged the sale with agents; and Tadeusz J. Sokolowski, 19, of Franklin Park, driver of the auto.

Undercover agents at 7 p.m. Wednesday arranged to meet Klupta near Wilke Road and Northwest Highway to pay $3,600 for one-half a pound of PCP, an animal tranquilizer, police said.

Street value of the PCP reportedly was $7,200.

After the transaction was made at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, other police moved in and arrested the pair, police said.

Police charged Klupta with illicitly selling a controlled substance; and Sokolowski with conspiracy in connection with delivery of a controlled substance. Klupta was released on $1,000 bail, and Sokolowski was freed on $3,000 bail.

The pair was ordered to appear Jan. 28 in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Couple pleads guilty to mail fraud

An Arlington Heights couple that pleaded guilty to charges of mail fraud will appear in U.S. District Court Feb. 1 for sentencing.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Thomas McQueen said Donald E. Davis, 45, and his wife, Carol, 27, both of 1034 S. Pine St., Arlington Heights, pleaded guilty Dec. 23 to 10 counts each of mail fraud.

The couple had been charged with 19 counts each of mail fraud after they allegedly used at least 20 credit cards obtained under aliases to bilk 11 firms out of $150,000 between September 1972 and January 1976.

McQueen said the remaining 18 charges against the Davises will be dismissed when the couple is sentenced by U.S. District Court Judge Frank McGarr in Chicago.

The Davises could face a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and $1,000 fines on each count of fraud, McQueen said.

WENDY YOSHIMURA, Patricia Hearst's underground companion, smiles as she leaves Alameda County Courthouse in Oakland, Calif. A jury of eight women and four men Thursday began deliberating her case. She is charged with possessing explosives and being part of a conspiracy to carry out terrorist bombings in 1972. During seven weeks of testimony, the prosecution sought to link her to a plot against the family of former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, a planned bombing of a Navy facility in Berkeley, and other conspiracies.

Cargo jet crashes in Alaska, 5 die

A Japan Air Lines DC8 cargo plane carrying 56 cattle crashed and burned on take-off from Anchorage International Airport Thursday, killing all five persons aboard as well as the animals. One victim was identified as Jim Wilson, about 40, Craig, Colo., a director of Colorado International Exports. He was accompanying the cattle to Tokyo. The four Japanese crew members aboard the plane were not identified. Witnesses said the plane got about 100 feet in the air before crashing and exploding in flames about 1,500 feet past the runway. The Federal Aviation Administration closed the airport to take-off and landings after the accident.

Mixer death suspect nabbed

A man wanted on suspicion of robbing an Amarillo, Tex., pizza restaurant and killing its manager by pushing her head into a dough mixing machine surrendered to Albuquerque authorities Thursday with his lawyer. David Grijalva, 23, "was booked into city jail on an open charge of murder," said police department spokesman Bob Fenton. Grijalva's wife, Kathy Jo, 18, was arrested at a motel Wednesday night and also booked for murder. "Amarillo authorities indicated they will attempt to extradite both of them," Fenton said.

Urge tanker be blown up

U. S. Coast Guard officials in Boston said Thursday they want to blow up the bow of the wrecked tanker Argo Merchant tanker even though it still may contain up to 1.3 million gallons of oil. Rear Admiral James Stewart said he and his staff had recommended detonation of the bow section of the Liberian-registry vessel to the National Strike Team. The national team discussed the proposal Thursday in Washington but made no final decision. The admiral said the plan to blow up the bow would have to be implemented before Feb. 15 in order to avoid the possibility of oil being present during the North Atlantic's fish spawning season.

Yellow dye warning hinted

The Food and Drug Administration said Thursday it may require warning labels on food containing the country's most widely used food dye, Yellow No. 5, because it may cause allergic reactions. FDA officials, who revealed the contemplated action during a congressional hearing into the whole question of food additives, said the most common allergic reaction to the dye is a hive-like skin irritation.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group, told the same hearing that seven out of 10 people who are allergic to aspirin are also allergic to the yellow dye and that asthma may also result as an allergic reaction. Wolfe, whose group asked the FDA for an immediate ban on the dye earlier this week, said its largest uses are in baked goods, candy, desert powders, ice cream and pet foods. Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., who chaired the Small Business Committee hearing said as many as 400,000 Americans may be allergic to it.

Lebanese weapons inventoried

Arab League peacekeepers Thursday checked inventories of tanks and artillery collected from Lebanese factions and Palestinian guerrillas. A Christian leader said up to 75 per cent of all heavy weapons were surrendered. Beirut newspapers said the operation was a success, but an Arab League committee planned a thorough check of the tanks, artillery and machine guns turned in against known inventories of each faction's firepower.

The Arab peacekeeping force has formed special units to raid any suspected weapons hideaways. The next step will be to round up all light and medium weapons in the country.

France protests Dauod issue

France, America's oldest ally, Thursday protested Washington's criticism of a Paris court's decision to free Palestinian guerrilla leader Abu Daoud. Jacques de Follin, the American section chief in the French Foreign Ministry, summoned U. S. charge d'affaires Samuel Gammon for the verbal, but official, protest directly ordered by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Carter rapped for selecting 'only 2' women

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Twice is not enough," the president of the National Organization of Women said Thursday, criticizing President-elect Jimmy Carter's incluson of only two women in his Cabinet.

"Apparently he found two," Karen DeCrow said. "But for those of us who know that there are tens of thousands of highly qualified women in this country, our feeling is twice is not enough.

"Women are 53 per cent of the population in this country, there are 13 cabinet posts, so I guess around seven" would be adequate representation in the Carter cabinet," she said.

JUANITA KREBS has been named by Carter to head the Commerce Dept. and Patricia Roberts Harris has been named to lead the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development.

Ms. DeCrow also challenged a pair of Carter's male selections, Atty. Gen. designate Griffin Bell and Joseph A. Califano, for secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

"The best thing you can say about Griffin Bell is that during the civil rights movement of the '60s in the South, he stood by," she said.

Califano's opposition to federal funds to subsidize abortions for the poor was unacceptable, Ms. DeCrow said.

"THAT'S discrimination against poor women," she said. "That's a disgraceful statement for a secretary of HEW to make."

NOW coupled criticism of the make-up of Carter's Cabinet with presentation of a women's state of the union message, a document much less optimistic than the one President Ford delivered to Congress Wednesday night.

The NOW version outlined sex discrimination, economic problems of women alone, and social impressions that women are inferior, good only for housework and mothering.

Of the 3,181 pages of past State of the Union messages, Ms. DeCrow said only four paragraphs mentioned women.

"WE BID good-by to President Ford," Ms. DeCrow said. "We bid a loving farewell to Betty Ford."

Asked earlier if Rosalynn Carter could influence the President to take more notice of women's issues, Ms. DeCrow said she hoped so.

"But if the question had been, 'Would the President's husband be able to affect her wishes?' That would please me greatly."

Hughes' will was planted, says attendant

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Melvin Dummar, the Utah service station operator who was cut in for a share of Howard Hughes' estate in the disputed "Mormon Will" has admitted planting the document but still insists he did not write it himself, an attorney Thursday said.

In addition, the attorney said, Dummar now is renouncing any claim to the Hughes estate should the will still be proved valid.

Attorney Harold Rhoden, representing former Hughes aide Noah Dietrich, executor of the will, said Dummar admitted delivering the musty, six-page, handwritten document to the Salt Lake City headquarters of the Mormon Church last April 27 on instructions from an unidentified Hughes aide.

Dummar "cracked" during questioning in Ogden Wednesday, admitting that he not only delivered the document but also had addressed the envelope in which it was found, said Rhoden.

Dummar insisted, however, that he did not write the will himself and was only carrying out instructions from a Hughes aide who gave him the document.

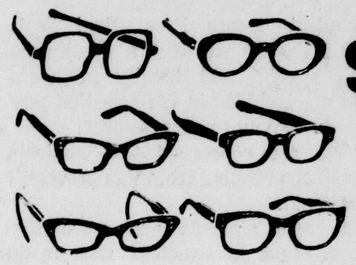

Last month, Nevada Atty. Gen. Robert List disclosed that Dummar's thumbprint had been found on the envelope containing the will and the print had been taken to the FBI for verification.

Rock may reenter Senate race

by STEVE BROWN

SPRINGFIELD — State Sen. Philip Rock, D-Chicago, who dropped out of the Illinois Senate leadership fight Sunday, said Thursday he is "reassessing" his position and may reenter the deadlocked race.

Rock held a closed-door meeting with several senators who are part of various factions in the dispute immediately after the Senate quit work for the week.

Thursday brought no new roll calls and there were indications the three Democratic factions were growing farther apart.

Although State Sen. Thomas Hynes, D-Chicago, optimistically predicted the dispute could be settled when the legislature returns Monday afternoon, there was no indication a compromise could be reached.

THE DISPUTE blocking the election of a senate president now focuses on opponents of State Sen. Richard M. Daley, D-Chicago, the late mayor's son. The Daley opponents believe he wants to control the upper chamber from behind the scenes.

Hynes insisted that while he has Daley's support, Daley is not attempting to orchestrate the selection process.

Rock had been a candidate for the Senate presidency, but dropped out after it became apparent he would not receive the support of Daley and other Chicago Democrats.

He met privately with State Senators Kenneth Buzbee, D-Carbondale, and Jerome Joyce, D-Kankakee. Both are members of the Democratic Study Group, which is supporting State Sen. Terry Bruce, D-Olney. State Sen. Robert G. Egan, D-Chicago, a Hynes supporter, also attended a meeting in Rock's office.

The leadership situation was unchanged from Wednesday when three roll calls produced the deadlock. Hynes has 21 votes, nine short of the 30-vote majority needed. Bruce has nine votes and State Sen. Harold Washington, D-Chicago, has his own vote and the support of three other senators.

HYNES MAY have caused a wider split to develop Thursday when he issued a press release outlining 20 reform proposals and referring to himself as the Democratic majority leader.

Bruce said that position does not exist and Hynes has no right to use the title. "He is merely the member of this party who has received the most votes," Bruce said.

Hynes and Bruce were in agreement on at least one point Thursday. Both said they did not want Republican support to win the senate presidency. The 24 Senate Republicans are voting for minority leader David Shapiro, R-Amboy, in the leadership election.

Bruce said he expects the Democratic Study group to develop its own list of proposed reforms Monday. Bruce called the reforms proposed by Hynes the "Avon list," indicating the Chicago Democrat's suggestions were merely cosmetic changes.

Hynes' proposals called for some procedural changes in the operation of the Senate, but Bruce said the changes were not enough.

At least for now

It's official, Trainor to keep post

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. James R. Thompson confirmed Thursday that James Trainor will continue as director of the Illinois Dept. of Public Aid under his administration on a temporary basis.

Thompson said some of the Walker administration cabinet officers will be asked to stay on in an interim capacity until replacements are found. The appointments of the Walker officials expire Monday.

The Herald disclosed Thursday that Trainor, who has headed the controversial department and been a target of some criticism from Thompson, would not be ousted immediately.

THE NEW governor insisted the decision to allow Trainor to remain public aid director was not a shift from his campaign pledge to find new people to head that agency or the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services.

Trainor, of Palatine, and Mary Lee Leahy, Dept. of Children and Family Services director, were the only two Walker administration officials singled out by Thompson for removal during the campaign. It is expected Trainor will remain in office for at least another month.

Some observers had expected Thompson to remove Trainor and Leahy immediately after taking office.

"I have never criticized Jim Trainor personally," Thompson said, adding he will offer the department diirectorship to a person this week. He did not indicate how long Trainor would stay on.

THOMPSON'S comments on Trainor came as he announced two cabinet and two staff appointments.

Thompson named Josephine Oblinger, 63, of Springfield to head the Illinois Dept. on Aging and retiring house minority leader James R. "Bud" Washburn, R-Morris, to be the director of the Dept. of Veterans Affairs.

Thompson said Mrs. Oblinger, who has been involved in both Sangamon County politics and senior citizens' activities, will be working on a plan to determine if the state can expand its home-care program for the elderly.

Washburn, a 10-year veteran of the legislature, campaigned for the U.S. Congress in the 15th District. However, he lost in the Republican primary to U.S. Rep. Thomas Cochran, who went on to beat Tim Hall in November.

THOMPSON'S schedule of appointments is running behind the previously announced pace. He had planned to make two announcements Thursday with six appointments. But one press conference was canceled.

Thompson aides have blamed poor weather in Springfield, Thompson's role as presiding offiicer of the Illinois Senate during the current leadership fight, and the inability to get certain appointees to the State Capitol as the reasons behind the delay.

Besides the new department heads, Thompson selected Dan E. Patterson, his administrative assistant during the gubernatorial campaign, to be a special assistant to the governor as a liaison with the Bureau of the Budget. He also named Michael Dunn, a campaign fund-raiser and the organizer of Monday's inaugural activities, to replace Patterson. Both men are 24 years old.

Chicagoans polled for mayor choice

by STEVE BROWN

SPRINGFIELD — Three of the nation's leading pollsters are surveying Chicagoans for potential candidates for the city's special mayoral election.

The Herald has learned that former governor Richard B. Ogilvie, who is being pushed by Republicans to enter that race, has commissioned Robert Teter, head of the Detroit-based Midwest Opinion Research, Inc. to conduct an in-depth poll during the next two weeks.

Teter, who conducted polls for President Ford during last year's campaign, will hold between 500 and 550 personal interviews to determine Ogilvie's chances for winning in the Democratic stronghold.

Ogilvie has been asked by Cook County Republican leaders to make a bid to become the successor to the late Richard J. Daley and the first Republican mayor in Chicago in more than 30 years.

Besides Teter, former Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan had Patrick Caddell, President-elect Jimmy Carter's pollster, conduct a survey of his strength.

HARTIGAN, WHO has become a vice president with the First National Bank of Chicago, said he is not a mayoral candidate, but confirmed Caddell did some polling for him.

"Caddell and I are friends, and he conducts some public opinion sampling for me from time to time. The mayoral race was among the questions asked recently," Hartigan said.

While Hartigan would not comment on the outcome of the poll, it was learned that the former lieutenant governor held his own when pitted against Cook County Board Pres. George Dunne and acting Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic, two of the most frequently mentioned possible candidates. Hartigan reportedly ran ahead of Chicago Alderman Roman Pucinski, the only announced candidate in the race.

A third poll is being conducted for former Chicago alderman William Singer by Washington-based researcher Peter Hart. Hart reportedly had been asked to do Ogilvie's polling, but declined because of his work for Singer.

NEITHER SINGER nor Ogilvie could be reached for comment Thursday. Singer ran unsuccessfully against Daley in the 1975 Democratic mayoral primary election. He was one of the most outspoken members of the small bloc of independent aldermen on the Chicago city council.

One knowledgeable marketing expert said the poll being conducted for Ogilvie could cost as much as $10,000. It is not known if the former governor is paying the total expense, or if GOP leaders pushing his candidacy are footing the bill.

Hartigan declined to comment on the cost of Caddell's work.

Slaying of prison guard called test for Thompson

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The murder of a Statesville Penitentiary guard the day Gov. James R. Thompson took office may have been a warning designed to test the new administration, Thompson and state prison officials Thursday said.

Thompson said he has ordered an investigation to determine whether the killing was an isolated incident "or whether this was a ritual warning by the prison population of the state of Illinois to the new governor — something we have experienced in Illinois in the past."

"In the past prison populations have sought to test a new administration after it took office," Thompson said. "If memory serves me correctly, a guard was murdered the day after Dan Walker was inaugurated and there were disturbances and uprisings in several state institutions."

STATE POLICE detectives have been sent to Statesville to investigate, Thompson said. "We're investigating and trying to do it in as low-key, calm and efficient manner as possible.

"There is no question there is a period of testing," Corrections Director Charles J. Rowe said.

Rowe said he met with state prison wardens last Friday to prepare for possible disturbances and added safeguards designed to prevent problems. Those included, he said, placing of two lieutenants in each Stateville cell block rather than the usual one.

Rowe said additional precautions now are being taken in all state prisons but refused to detail specific plans to avoid alerting inmates.

"I can't quarantee that those things won't happen again," he said, "but I can assure you the wardens and I are doing everything we can to prevent it again."

STATESVILLE guard Lt. Peter Beckett Burd was fatally stabbed in the neck Monday as he supervised the prison's evening meal. Lt. Joseph Barry Foster was stabbed several hours earlier but was not seriously wounded.

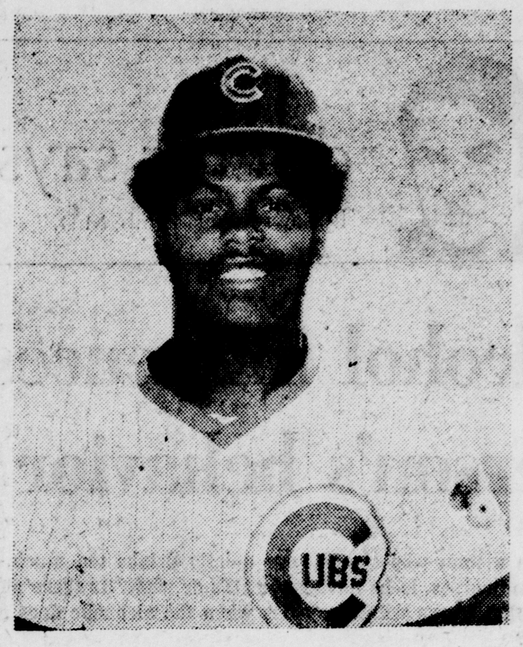

Lottery chief Batch to stay 30 more days

Illinois State Lottery Supt. Ralph Batch has agreed to withdraw his resignation and stay on for an extra 30 days.

Gov. James R. Thompson said he asked Batch to stay on a little longer because Revenue Director Robert Whitler "expressed concern" over the sale of the latest group of lottery tickets without a superintendent. He said he would sit down with Batch and a new chairman of the lottery board, who he expects to name Friday, during those 30 days and discuss whether Batch's resignation then should become effective.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Alcohol influences person's behavior

When a man who sleeps very quietly drinks too much, hollers, yells and curses, is he having the DTs or what? Is there an organization that works with alcoholics when the alcoholic does not want to quit?

More than likely he is just drunk. Alcohol is an anesthetic and has some parallel actions similar to ether. At one stage along the route to total anesthesia there is an excitement phase. With ether anesthesia the patient gets excited, threshes around and is difficult to control unless more ether is given until he passes on to full anesthesia. Alcohol acts in a similar manner, and after drinking too much, a person may become agitated, excited or active. With a little more alcohol he passes out, or is anesthetized.

What is available varies in different communities. I recommend that you check the Yellow Pages of your telephone book under alcohol and see what is listed for your community. A few phone calls will then tell you what you can expect. If your community is very small, you may need to check the phone directory of the nearest large city. There are organizations that help the families of alcoholics, which is also important in such situations.

To give you information on the effects of alcohol I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-4. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your request to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

My 3-year-old son was born with lactose deficiency. He was hospitalized at three weeks because he was dehydrated. It was never really explained to me exactly what it was and when and if he will grow out of this.

I am concerned about how to give him enough calcium since he cannot drink milk or eat cheese. I know there is calcium in meat, fish and leafy vegetables. Until three months ago he never ate green vegetables. His diet consists of all meats, poultry, eggs, corn, potatoes, mushrooms, broccoli, string beans, lettuce, cucumbers, all fruits except pears (because I was told they contained lactose), breads and cereal from all grains but oats and rice.

How can he get a balanced diet without milk or cheese?

Lactose is a double sugar and found only in milk and milk products. It is not found in meat products or any vegetables, not even in pears. So what you have to do is avoid all foods made with milk or milk products. You cannot use milk in cooking either. That is the only restriction. You will find a lot of lactose in some candies that use milk in preparation.

Your child needs about 800 milligrams of calcium a day. You can get calcium in spinach and related leafy vegetables, and also from mature beans. There is a lot of calcium in canned salmon if you eat the bones. There is very little calcium in meats, fish and foods you are relying on.

You can use one of the milk substitutes found in the baby food section of most grocery stores. These are made with soybeans and contain lots of calcium.

Some of the canned baby food cereals are very high in calcium and you can check the labels for the amount. As little as three and a half ounces of some of these will provide more than 700 milligrams of calcium. These can also be used by adults who need extra calcium.

Washed jacket needs water-repellent coating

Dear Dorothy: When I bought my nylon jacket it had been treated with a water-repellent. However, I made the mistake of washing it and now it's "water-attractive" — like a sponge. How can I restore its water-repellency?—E. B. Kruger

You made no mistake. You just prepared your jacket for a fresh coating of water-repellent. It is always put on something clean. If you do not know the type of water-repellent that was originally used, get a spray can of the popular fabric protector. It will work like the original treatment — and keep you dry.

Dear Dorothy: Is there any way to stop squeaking of the metal in our breakfast bar stools? — Mrs. Helen Castor

It depends on the construction. If they are rivited, they need to be re-pounded. If put on with screws, they have to be tightened. If upholstered, they will have to be taken apart — probably professionally.

Dear Dorothy: Some of your readers might like my way of making butterfly shrimp lay flat when it is deep-fat fried. Do not cut entirely through the body of the shrimp. Just flatten with the back of a knife or a gentle smack of the rolling pin. The important thing is to just nick the transparent membrane at several points so the shrimp doesn't pucker when dropped into the hot fat. — Dan Maitland.

Expert testifies to stiff grease on Sabich's gun

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — The pistol that killed pro skier Vladimir (Spider) Sabich was so packed with grease that it could have gone off accidentally in the hand of singer Claudine Longet, a ballistics expert testified Thursday.

The expert, called as a witness for Miss Longet in her felony-manslaughter trial for the death of her lover, Sabich, also said the safety catch on the fatal German-made .22-caliber Erma pistol did not work and Miss Longet need not have pulled the trigger for the weapon to fire.

Defense attorney Charles Weedman ended his defense of Miss Longet, ex-wife of singer Andy Williams, with testimony of the expert, Peter Martin, an employe of a Maryland firearms lab, and Jim Lilstrom, advertising manager for Head Ski Corp., who said Sabich told him the week before the shooting that his relationship with Miss Longet was a good one.

DISTRICT JUDGE George Lohr then recessed the trial for the day and said final arguments would be given Friday.

Martin said he found more than one thing wrong with the fatal pistol when he examined it. One of the most important things, he said, was that the firing mechanism was packed with "stiff grease." He said the pistol could have fired "if there were sufficient amounts of the (grease) residue on the firing pin."

"Out of many hundreds of guns I have examined for malfunction, many have malfunctioned as a result of this kind of stiff grease."

Martin also said, "I found the safety catch to be inoperative. The safety bar was put in upside down."

Martin said the stiff grease was the result of evaporated lubricating oil.

"Is it true you tested this gun and could not get it to work without pulling the trigger?" asked chief prosecutor Ashley Anderson.

"I found that it would fire if the safety catch was fully engaged," Martin said.

LILSTROM SAID he and his wife skied with Sabich and Miss Longet the week before the shooting. He said he asked Sabich about the relationship and the skier told him, "We have it together."

"They were really getting along better than at any time since I'd known them," Lilstrom said.

When the French-born singer appeared at the courthouse at the start of the day, she was greeted by well-wishers. Asked how she felt about her own testimony given Wednesday, she said, "We'll just have to wait and see."

The maximum penalty for felony manslaughter is 10 years in prison and a $30,000 fine.

Williams and actor Jack Nicholson appeared at the courthouse before Martin testified. Nicholson, who knew Sabich, 32, two-time world pro ski champion, and Miss Longet, sat in the front row. Williams remained in the courtroom corridor.

SINGER ANDY Williams and his former wife Claudine Longet reflect outside court house in Aspen, Colo. Thursday after trial was recessed until today.

Reforms might restore effectiveness to Caucus

The wheels of the Arlington Heights Caucus, that powerful political machine that has been a dominant force in village elections for 20 years, have ground to a temporary halt.

The Caucus has announced it will sit out the April 5 village elections.

Lack of qualified candidates, abandonment by Caucus stalwarts, minimal support from homeowners' associations and adverse press coverage were cited by Caucus officials as reasons the Caucus will be unable to field a slate of five.

While these problems may be present, they represent a rather superficial overview of the problem faced by the Caucus.

Arlington Heights isn't short of candidates in the upcoming election. Seven persons, some of whom previously ran with Caucus backing and others who once sought Caucus support, have already announced they will run for one of the four trustee posts up for election.

The problem is with the Caucus system itself.

When the Caucus was organized in 1956 it served an important role in the village by channeling talented individuals into public office.

But with its successes and near total domination of village elections came a resistance to change the eventual stagnation.

Candidates in 1975 and again this year turned away from the Caucus fearing being a "Caucus candidate" was more of a liability than an asset.

The Caucus may be doomed, but we hate to see what was once a valuable political force die without at least one last attempt to revamp its outmoded bylaws.

We hope several bylaw changes will be considered by Caucus officials when they convene prior to the 1979 election.

Possible changes include:

• Opening the candidate selection process to the public so that all interested persons will be able to judge the qualifications of individuals seeking Caucus endorsement.

• Allowing a minimum of three to four days between the interviews of applicants and the selection of candidates. This would allow the general public to become familiar with the background and views of all applicants.

• Having two qualified candidates for each vacant post selected at a general Caucus meeting instead of forming a "Caucus slate." This would assure a contest on election day and avoid the problem of Caucus candidates with differing views running on the same slate.

• Abandoning the political arena after candidate selection, leaving the campaign organization to the candidates.

Such reforms are not designed to restore the Caucus to its role of total domination of Arlington Heights' political processes. Instead, the organization could become one valuable way to encourage qualified persons to seek public office.

If it becomes once again a kind of tool for attracting newcomers into village politics, it will deserve to survive and the village's political system will be better for its presence.

Televised death to end executions?

Has violence become so commonplace in our society that televised coverage of an execution would be nothing more than one more media sensation?

Or would the spectacle of legally authorized death be so repugnant that this society would once and for all rise up against the death penalty?

Those questions are the key ones in the current discussions which revolve around a ruling by a federal judge in Texas which ordered the state to allow television coverage of any executions.

The questions also are not going to wait long for answers. Texas has an execution scheduled for Jan. 25, just a week after the scheduled death of Gary Gilmore in Utah. Officials of public television station KERA-TV in Dallas, Tex. are debating whether or not to exercise the right to cover the death.

In a way, a televised execution would be merely a logical extension of the way both the illusion and reality of violence has come into our living rooms.

It began in 1963 when Lee Harvey Oswald was shot on live television in the turmoil following Pres. John F. Kennedy's assassination.

In the 13 years since then, we have seen the Vietnam War fought on television. Professional sports ranging from football through hockey have become more violent. And the acceptable level of gore on television's entertainment shows has risen proportionately.

It is no wonder then that some persons believe a televised execution would be nothing more than an exciting new side-show entertainment to large portions of the desensitized American public.

We have more faith in the public than that. And while we hope a televised execution will never become reality, the mere possibility adds dimension to the debate on the death penalty.

If televising an execution ought to be unthinkable in civilized society, how can the execution itself be justified? The argument used by the American Civil Liberties Union in an open letter to convicted killer Gilmore that he could not be allowed to bring society down to his level by demanding his own murder is persuasive.

The current debate over the death penalty, with the inclusion of the possibility of television coverage, may be the one thing that is needed to bring society around to the position of giving up this form of punishment.

If that is the case, then even the spector of televised executions will have served a purpose.

Carter's options limited

It's Ford's budget for '77

by RAY CROMLEY
Commentary

WASHINGTON — Don't expect great spending changes — either up or down — in the first year of the Carter administration.

There's not much a new president can do, however radical or conservative his views may be, to effect important spending shifts in less than 12 months. It usually takes presidents at least a year and a half to put their imprint on federal spending.

There's much talk already about the first Carter budget. The president-elect's men are already gathering the detailed material they need for amendments they expect to make in the income and spending proposals President Ford will send up in early January. There's no reason to doubt at this juncture that Carter will propose a considerable number of amendments earlier than most new presidents — and that these could add up to some billions of dollars in proposed shifts for Congress to consider.

BUT THE BUDGET we are talking about — the Carter-amended Ford budget — takes effect in October, 1977, and then only if Congress has voted the funds by that time.

Though the funds for major new programs presumably could be made available in October, Congress willing, getting high spending plans into action involves a complicated series of steps which takes months. Most major federal programs, in fact, turn out to be amazingly small the first year of operation. The mammoth undertakings we look at in amazement today are, in the main, several years old.

NOW IT IS QUITE possible that Carter will attempt to beat the game — quite legitimately — in a supplementary budget for this fiscal year, that is, for the 12 months which began in October 1976. If sizable changes are involved, this would require a major juggling of accounts with a speed not seen to date. It would involve adjustments in income and outgo so complicated they would paralyze the major departments of government whose spending programs are set for the year. And it would most assuredly involve putting the government far more into the red than even Congress is likely willing to go.

That's not all. The juggling might be done in jig time on paper in the Carter White House. But it would take Congress months to hold hearings, argue and vote on any radical departures Carter might propose, even if they were simple repetitions of measures Congress previously voted and President Ford vetoed. For when bills are run through the mill again, they're invariably chewed over. What comes out the second go-round rarely mirrors the bill passed the first try.

THEREFORE, IF unemployment is to be reduced significantly in 1977 and the economy is to move ahead briskly, it will be because of forces set in motion in 1976, or because industrialists become so optimistic at the prospects they see in the years just ahead that they implement expansion plans of a size not seen in recent years. And because consumers, who have been cautious with their money of late, decide that 1977 is the year to draw down their savings accounts and start buying.

Carter's problem, then, is not the budget, or Congress. His task is to create an attitude of confidence through the country, a confidence among the rich, the middle class and the poor that things are going to get better and stay better.

The rich and the middle class must be convinced it will pay for them to take the changes they must take to set things rolling. The poor must be convinced they have a part to play and that the upswing will not pass them by.

The question is whether President Carter has that sales ability.

Pound won't aid unwanted pets

Just what type of favor is being done for man and dog by creating a new dog pound? It would seem that Cook County is trying to make things easier for ignorant, irresponsible people to abandon their pets. I am sick to death of reading about stray animals that have bitten an innocent child. I am sick of reading about stranded animals that starve to death. I am sick of seeing the insides of pets that lay on the roadsides of many streets.

Where is the feeling, the sensitivity, the compassion? There is none as far as these types of people are concerned. You can thank our throwaway society where life no longer has any value. The way people treat their pets is the same way they treat the elderly. "If you outlived your usefulness, you must be destroyed." This attitude is sick and something must be done.

Massive birth control methods for our exploding pet population must be enforced and most importantly, the public must be educated about the great responsibilities attached in adopting a pet. It's not considered "cute" to let pets run loose so they can mate and add further burdens to the population. Lastly, people who adopt pets should be scrutinized as heavily as people who adopt children.

Face it, Cook County can build two new dog pounds, but they are still dealing with the symptoms rather than the cause. Until they can implement and enforce programs for birth control and public education, this problem will continue to multiply.

A patient praises Alexian hospital

Having just been through surgery at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, I was very interested in the results of the national nurses poll that showed that 40 per cent of the nurses polled would not want to be confined in the hospital in which they worked.

After my surgery and my recovery, I have the highest regard for the doctors and staff at Alexian Brothers. The professionalism, devotion to their work and patient care shown by my surgeon, Dr. Labinsky, my anesthesiologist, the nurses in the recovery room, the respiratory personnel and the nurses and candy stripers on the fourth floor were excellent.

One never realizes the importance of post-operative care until he or she has been through it. The encouragement and help of the people at Alexian Brothers made my recovery easier and faster.

Recovery is sometimes more mental than physical and this is where the St. Alexian staff excelled in their constant attention and encouragement of their patients.

I sincerely thank the nurses and staff of Alexian Brothers for making a traumatic experience, surgery, a lesson in devotion, caring and encouragement.

Elequent inaugural architecture?

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Architects, while fine folks as a rule tend at times to become aesthetically overwrought.

A classic example of rapturous overkill may be found in a press release from the 1977 Inaugural Committee describing the White House reviewing stand where President-elect Carter will watch next week's inaugural parade.

The committee, whose appreciation of the design may have made it a bit giddy, says the stand will make "seven statements" about Carter's "values and his basic philosophies."

BY MY COUNT, that is four more statements than emanate from such architectural gems as Frank Lloyd Wright's Greek church in Wauwatosa, Wis., and Le Corbusier's chapel in Ronchamp, France.

Even so loquacious an edifice as the Taj Mahal only makes five statements, as I understand it.

The press release quotes one of the architects who drew up the blueprints as saying that "humility, closeness to the people, concern for the ecology, concern for our resources, historical preservation and even his policy on energy will be expressed by the design of this stand."

IT SAYS "the size, the canting, the materials and even the foundation will tell the people a lot about their president."

And it adds that the "starkly simple" facility will cost $170,000.

Leaving aside the question of how anything that costs $170,000 can be equated with stark simplicity, I fear the reviewing stand will be saying a lot more than the average parade watcher will be able to comprehend.

While the average parade watcher may be able to grasp what the structure's size, materials and foundation are telling him, any statements made by the canting likely will be over his head.

WHICH PROBABLY IS just as well. For anything the canting says probably will be pure cant anyhow.

Bear in mind that the reviewing stand is only one of the architectural triumphs of the inauguration.

Currently arising on the Capitol Plaza is the inaugural platform itself, a construction project roughly comparable to the erection of the Great Pyramids.

But it is no enduring monument before which men will pause and marvel for ages to come.

IT IS, RATHER, the ultimate achievement of America's throwaway culture — a $325,000 disposable television stage that will be used for a few hours on Jan. 20 and then dismantled, steel girders, noble columns and all.

After reading the press release on the reviewing stand, I decided to see what sort of statements the inaugural platform might be making. Here are some of the things it told me:

It is one of the biggest boondoggles of all times.

Expenditure of a comparable amount of time, money, effort and materials probably would replace all the substandard housing in the average American slum.

Inauguration architecture should be seen and not heard.

Alternatives to coffee

Sip into something new: adviser

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department's consumer affairs adviser Thursday issued a list of money-saving alternatives to those who love to sip something but don't like paying $3 a pound for coffee.

But they all involve drinking something other than brewed or ground coffee, which at Thursday's supermarket price of $3.19 a pound works out to 6.4 cents a cup, said the official, Nancy Steorts.

For those who want something cheaper, department consumer economists say a cup of tea can cost as little as 1.4 cents, bouillon made from cubes will cost about 1.9 cents a cup, a cereal beverage called Postum can be brewed for 2.3 cents a cup, instant coffee may be about 2.4 cents a cup and skim milk may cost about 3.6 cents a cup.

FOR SHOPPERS who want to figure out just how much they're paying, Mrs. Steorts issued a shopping guide showing the number of cups yielded by a variety of beverages.

To use the guide, divide the posted store prices by the number of cups. For instance, one pound of regular coffee produces about 50 cups. At $3.19 a pound, that's 6.4 cents a cup.

For other beverages, use the following figures to divide into prices:

- Regular instant coffee. 142 cups in a 10 ounce container.
- Loose tea. 100 cups an eight ounce package currently selling at $1.39.
- Tea bags. 100 cups an eight ounce package at $1.95.
- Postum. 68 cups an eight ounce package.
- Whole milk. 11 cups a half gallon.
- Skim milk powder. 107 cups from a package which makes 20 quarts.
- Orange juice concentrate. 11 cups a can making two quarts.
- Bouillon cubes. 50 cups a container of 50 cubes.
- Dry cocoa. 42 cups an 8 ounce package (but costs can vary widely depending on how you prepare it).

For hardcore coffee lovers, she said a cup of regular coffee made from a "store brand" may cost only about 4.8 cents compared to 6.4 cents for "name brand" brews. She also advised brewing only as much coffee as you intend to use and trying "coffee that is a little weaker than usual."

Rates may dip on savings accounts

Watch your savings accounts and savings certificates. There have been signs around the country that some institutions are trimming the rates they pay you on such accounts, and you may not get advance notice of the change.

On the brighter side, there have been signs the interest you have to pay for loans and mortgages also is being trimmed. Get a little, give a little. That's the way it works.

Regulations vary on how individual banks and savings institutions give notice to depositors of interest rate changes. Some notify by mail. Others may post a notice in their lobby, which you may or may not see. The best course is to make inquiry directly, and don't just ask if the interest rate is being changed. You also have to ask if the method of computing interest is being changed, and, if so, what the over-all effect is.

Speaking dollar-wise
by Robert S. Rosefsky

FOR EXAMPLE: An institution might maintain the same interest rate on savings accounts, but it could switch from daily compounding to quarterly compounding. Or it could switch from paying on a day-of-deposit to day-of-withdrawal basis to a quarterly basis (interest starts to run not on the day of deposit, but on the first day of the next quarter, and it stops running not on the day of withdrawal but on the last day of the previous quarter).

Either of these changes can make a big difference in the amount of interest you receive.

With respect to savings certificates, or CDs, note that most of these will automatically renew at the then current rate, unless you withdraw the funds or transfer them to a different kind of account. Check with your own institution to determine what the renewal rate will be on any such certificates and what alternatives are available to you.

Just because the interest is being reduced does not mean that making a change is wise. Before you make a move, determine whether or not you would suffer a penalty as a result.

A penalty could offset a slightly higher rate that you might find at a competing institution.

A WORD OF caution to those who might contemplate abandoning your federally insured savings altogether, seeking something with better inflation protection: Beware! In recent years I've heard too many cases of people who abandoned the tried and true for something better, only to find out that the something better went bust and left them high and dry.

The lure of beating inflation, as pitched by a fast-talking salesman, can be attractive indeed. But you'll be likely taking on added risk — in many cases, excessive risk — and you could end up losing more to the scheme than you might to inflation.

If you want to achieve more gain, you have to take the risk of more loss. That's also the way things work, and nobody has come up with a better program.

Cold spell pushes Dow up 7.70

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oil and related issues, benefiting from demands created by the coldest winter in years, led prices higher Thursday for the first time in three days, in fairly active trading in New York Stock Exchange issues.

"The cold weather is the reason for energy issues rising. The energy crisis is upon us," Charles Maxwell, vice president of the Cyrus J. Lawrence Inc. brokerage, said, "and the pressure is mounting on Congress to decontrol prices."

Analysts also said some investors, dismayed Wednesday when they learned the Wholesale Price Index rose 0.9 per cent in December, felt inflation pressures were not as bad as feared because the growth rate of industrial commodities prices moderated.

AS A RESULT, the Dow Jones industrial average, which had plunged 18.62 points the previous two sessions, rose 7.90 to 976.15. It was ahead from the outset, although buying subsided briefly during the early afternoon.

Through Wednesday, the blue-chip average over-all had fallen more than 36 points for the first eight trading days of 1977 or more than half the 57-point gain it registered in December. Many observers said the December rally amounted to investors jumping the gun on the new year.

On a broader basis than the Dow, the NYSE common stock index rose 0.44 to 56.39 and the average price of a common share 27 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter stocks, gained 0.80 to 104.20.

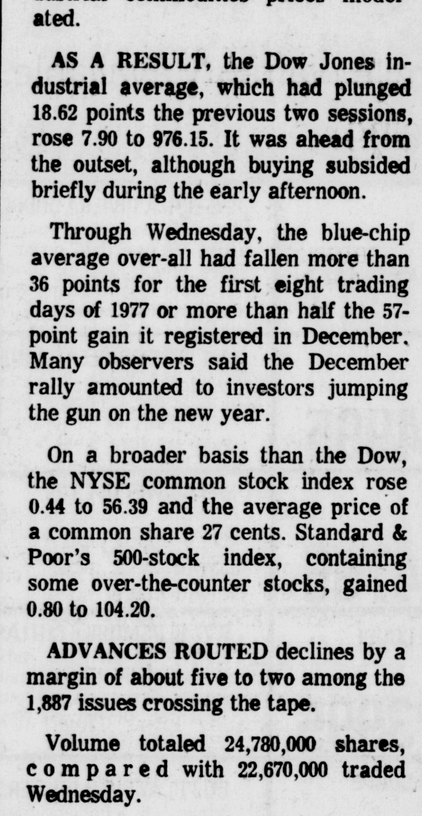

ADVANCES ROUTED declines by a margin of about five to two among the 1,887 issues crossing the tape.

Volume totaled 24,780,000 shares, compared with 22,670,000 traded Wednesday.

Turnover of NYSE issues listed on all exchanges totaled 28,632,400 shares, compared with 26,615,930 traded Wednesday.

As a result, Texas International, which has an interest in a wide range of oil activities, was the most active NYSE-listed stock at 4 p.m. EST, gaining 7/8 to 11-1/8 on 400,700 shares.

Superior Oil, which has large natural gas reserves, climbed 2 to 225. Amerada Hess, the largest heating oil supplier on the East Coast, rose 1-5/8 to 33 3/4. Sony Corp., which plans to introduce two industrial videocorder machines, was the second most active NYSE-listed stock, up 1/8 to 8-5/8 on 308,000 shares, including a block of 110,000 shares at 8½. International Telephone & Telegraph was the third most active issue, up ½ to 33¾ on 296,700 shares, including a block of 203,800 shares at 33¾.

1977 car sales up 21% to 4-year high

The U.S. auto industry opened 1977 with early January new car sales topping last year by 21 per cent to hit the highest level in four years. The 143,771 car sales reported Thursday for the Jan. 1-10 period were nearly double the disastrously low sales in the opening 10-day period in 1975 that triggered massive layoffs and the start of cash rebates. More than 245,000 workers were idled then because of low sales. In sharp contrast, the Ford Motor Co. said this year's early January sales were up 34 per cent, Chrysler Corp. reported a 22 per cent gain, General Motors a 17 per cent. Despite its price cuts and cash rebates American Motors reported its sales were off 17 per cent — the ninth period in a row it has fallen below a previous yearly level.

AMA reveals health care plan

A new American Medical Assn. proposal for national health insurance, unveiled at a news conference Thursday would provide insurance benefits for workers, poor persons and those without jobs. "The basic concept of this proposal is full health care for all persons through private health insurance," the AMA said. "We feel strongly that our 1977 proposal fairly represents the viewpoints of this country's private sector," said AMA Pres. Dr. Richard Palmer of Alexandria, Va. The bill would require employers to offer health insurance to workers and their families; provide government subsidized insurance for the poor and jobless; and increase Medicare benefits for the elderly. Children under 7 would be fully covered for dental care, with the age limit raised annually to include, ultimately, all persons under 18. Other benefits would include coverage for hospital and physician care, home health services, emergency, nursing home aand preventive services.

Insurance tests resume Jan. 22

Additional information on testing dates is available from the department office, 160 N. LaSalle St., Chicago.

Earnings per common share for the nine months amounted to $1.25 compared with $1.27 a year earlier. During the third quarter ended Iov. 30, sales totaled $132,971,000; net earnings were $1,361,000, and earnings per share were 30 cents.

VICE PRESIDENT ROCKEFELLER

But Rockefeller 'never looks backwards . . .'

'Dems would have elected me president'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Nelson Rockefeller is confiident he would have been elected president had he been a Democrat. But he says he turned down President Harry Truman's offer to change parties and never regretted it.

In a rambling interview in his office less than a week before he ends 45 years of public service, Rockefeller said he is not disappointed about not being president, was "thrilled" to serve as vice president and plans to live to be 100.

"I never look backward. I never waste time on disappointments to tell you the truth," he said. "I've been grateful for the opportunities I've had in life."

HIS DESK WAS cluttered with packing boxes, and outside, aides of successor Walter Mondale were measuring the reception room for size.

Rockefeller said his plans for the future including getting the Rockefeller family fortune — which some say is in exress of $1 billion — ready to pass on to the next generation.

He hints, too, that the pubic has not seen the last of him, although he does not expect to hold public office again.

"I can't see any possible circumstances that would lead me into any full-time government service in the future," he said.

"Basically I want to catch up with Happy and the boys — I've told the boys I plan to live to be 100 you know." He said his plans include building a new home on his recently purchased ranch in Texas.

ROCKEFELLER did not want to comment on some things, including whether his presence on the GOP ticket would have won the election for President Ford, or if he could have beaten Jimmy Carter if he had been running for President.

"I never look backwards and speculate," he said.

But he did look back on his choice of political parties.

"I was born into the party in the sense that the family (members) were Republicans. President Truman asked me to shift parties and I was greatly honored. I said subsequently that I felt deeply I would rather stay in the Republican Party and try to pull it forward rather than go over to the Democratic Party and find myself in a position of opposing certain things I didn't agree with.

"It's as simple as that. I made the decision, I told him what I felt and to tell you the truth I never gave it another thought."

WOULD HE HAVE been elected President if he had changed parties?

"Yes. Sure . . . Because I think I would have gotten the nomination.

"My philosophy about politics is that it's a means to an end and the end is good government. I didn't put enough emphasis on the means to achieve the ends, frankly, because I was more interested in achieving the ends.

"I didn't concentrate enough on the politics and concentrated too much on the issues and substance — which is interesting and exciting, but doesn't contribute toward the nomination."

What does he want to be remembered for?

"Love of country. Dedication to public service. And a deep respect and abiding faith in free citizens and the worth of each and every individual based on respect for human dignity and equality of opportunity."

7 GOP contenders pledge to better party image

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Promising to restore the party to past glory, seven veteran politicians seeking the Republican National Committee chairmanship hustled for votes Thursday.

Campaigning in regional caucuses and in hotel corridors, the candidates were led by former Sen. William Brock of Tennessee and two state GOP chairmen, Richard Richards of Utah and Kent McGough of Ohio.

But none of the three appeared to have a first ballot victory tied up in advance of the two day meeting of the 162 national committee starting Friday.

ALSO IN THE race are Indiana state chairman Thomas Milligan, national committee cochairman Robert Carter, White House aide Arthur Fletcher and political consultant Buehl Berentson.

In the only open caucus, all of the candidates told the western states national committee members, the GOP has an image problem. They said a high priority of the new chairman should be to persuade independents and the Democrats that Republicans care about ordinary people.

The candidates also generally agreed rebuilding has to start at the local and state levels.

Carater and McGough pledged immediate steps to regain GOP seats in state legislatures.

CONNECTICUT GOP chairman Fred Biebel was not an announced candidate, but said he had a sizable bloc of committed votes from the Northeast ready if he enters.

All the candidates spent Thursday visiting regional meetings of the Republican state chairmen and buttonholing early arriving committee members in hotel corridors.

Brock appeared most confident, saying while Richards had the largest number of publicly committed votes "we're getting close." Reflecting a general view that Richards' early starting candidacy has peaked too soon, Brock said, "I think I have the momentum."

Richards went to his own western regional chairmen's meeting emphasizing he is not a stalking horse for a 1980 presidential candidate or an ideological purist.

Although he says he has support of former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, Richards emphasized he helped President Ford win a big victory in Utah after Regan lost the nomination. He said the GOP already "has too few people" to indulge in ideological purges.

McGough, who waited until the last minute to enter the race, said he probably would run right behind Brock and Richards in the initial voting. He said the campaigning Thursday could produce an early winner.

Zero Mostel and 'Fiddler' are back on Broadway

by FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

The old saying, "You can't get too much of a good thing," applies to the first Broadway revival of "Fiddler on the Roof" five years after the original eight-year engagement finally ran out of audiences.

Reviving any musical, even Broadway's longest run musical, so soon would appear to be risky business. But the producers apparently felt they were playing it safe by casting Zero Mostel, the original star of the show, in the role of Tevye. They were right.

Tickets are selling like hotcakes for the 22-week run, which opened at the Winter Garden in late December. Mostel's flamboyant characterization of the wise but clownish Jewish milkman and an absolutely first rate recreation of the original Joseph Stein-Jerry Bock-Sheldon Harnick show, directed and choreographed by Jerome Robbins, are not to be missed by theater lovers who never saw "Fiddler" or never saw Mostel as Tevye.

MOSTEL WAS IN the original show only one season (1964-65) and was succeeded by a dozen other Tevyes, including Paul Lipson, who plays a winning Lazar Wolf, the butcher, in the current production. If memory serves, Mostel's warmed over Tevye is broader, gimmickier and even more outrageous than his original but just as lovable. For $30,000 a week Mostel has pulled out all the stops except vocally. He tends to mumble quite a bit.

It takes a strong character actress to stand up to Mostel in the role of Golde, his wife, but Thelma Lee — who played with five road companies of "Fiddler" — more than fills the bill. She plays the long-suffering Golde with authority and a beautiful singing voice. If she would tone down the stridency of her interpretation, she could make Golde more sympathetic, as the character was played in the film version of "Fiddler."

The list of fine characterizations is long. Mention must be made of Ruth Jaroslow's total immersion in the role of Yente, the matchmaker; Irwin Pearl's sensitive interpretation of the awkward tailor, Motel; Jeff Keller's intense and attractive playing of Perchik, the student; and Elizabeth Hale, Chris Callan and Nancy Tompkins' quite individual characterizations of Tevye's eldest daughters.

THIS SHOW began a national tour last June and broke box office records in Boston, Los Angeles, Chicago and other cities. Jerome Robbins did not step in to polish the restaging until the end of the tour, but he has done his usually brilliant job, especially apparent in the exciting dance numbers. It is to be regretted that this 13-year-old show was the last gift of Robbins' genius to Broadway.

The refurbished sets and costumes by Boris Aronson and Patricia Ziprodt, respectively, look as good as new. And that goes for the whole show, which is as engrossing and magical — and humanly inspiring — as any work ever created for the American stage. Already there's a rumor that "Fiddler" may be fiddling on Broadway longer than the presently posted early June closing date.

Carlos Santana's had a musical resurrection

by STAN MIESES

For two nights more than 10,000 French teenagers packed the Pavillion du Paris to hear Europe's hottest band, Santana. Hundreds more tried to fight their way into the converted indoor market to join the rough and rowdy crowd inside, dancing, fighting, singing and sweating along with the continental sensation. San Francisco's renowned street band, led by its curious and temperamental, yet singularly talented holy man, Carlos Santana, has emerged from dissension and misdirection to create a popular force in rock music that must again be recognized.

Their current album, "Festival," is shipping out with a greater marketplace demand than any of its seven predecessors, and it arrives on the heels of "Amigos," generally regarded as the first satisfying record Santana had done in years. Somehow, Carlos' penchant for a more intense, jazzy sound did not quite catch on with the following that applauded "Oye Como Va," "Black Magic Woman," and "Evil Ways."

His image as a disciple of Sri Chinmoy further confused fans eager to hear the "earth music" that made the Santana band popular. But "Amigos" did much to mitigate the confusion, and "Festival" should prove to cement both old and new followers of the band.

THE ALBUM IS A wide-ranging effort that includes a distinctly European sounding ballad, "Revelations" (already released as a single in Europe), several Latin burners, "Let The Children Play," "Verao," and "Maria Caracoles"; hard funk, Earth, Wind Fire-style; blues, and spacy-inspirational instrumentals. Carlos was once quoted as saying he didn't want to sound like Carlos Santana, and indeed, here he makes the attempt to become the consummate guitarist.

The shift didn't come easy. There were a few revolving-door band members, and the current crew is not the same line up heard on the "Festival" lp. The only standbys are Chepito Areas, the fine timbal player, back with the group after a three-year absence, and keyboard player, Tom Coster, Carlos' closest friend in the band and also a follower of Sri Chinmoy. Also new is the band's solid management, headed by promoter Bill Graham, and carefully shepherded by road manager- confidante Ray Etzler. It's made a world of difference, as everyone in the band will agree.

"All around, he's changed for the best," says Tom Coster of Carlos. "When I first began with the band four and a half years ago, he wasn't a disciple then, but it was around that time that he and John (McLaughlin) began that transformation. Now I'd say he had more tolerance, greater respect for people, and virtually no rock star attitude.

"Devadip (Carlos' spiritual name) and I have been through a lot since 1974. We had no band, no nothing for awhile. It's given us a lot of strength. Carlos realized that he had gotten all the other stuff out of his system, and he meant to return to the sound that originally made us successful. As time went by, and I became more involved in the band, I knew what the public wanted and I felt the public should be thanked for making Santana a household name

"IT'S DIFFICULT FOR A level-headed musician, who wants to grow. Sometimes it leaves the audience behind. But we found out that it is possible to play the kind of music people want to hear and still show great musicianship. There's no need to be complex and that's no cop-out."

It also helps your creative mobility when you've got a fat contract under your belt, and Santana has gotten just that from Columbia Records. It calls for seven albums in the next five years at $400,000 per, plus what their lawyer called "the highest" royalty rates. "Festival" is the first, and is shipping gold, the fifth album in the United States for Santana to reach that sales plateau. Everybody's jumping. Even Carlos allowed himself, uncharacteristically, to buy two velvet suits in Paris.

The new band, judging from their Parisian performance, is as high-energy as the Santana band has ever been, with a full complement of rhythm players, and a new lead singer, Luther Rabb. Carlos performed in his velvet suits. That was the most outstanding alteration in his stage ambiance, which is usually somewhat separate and aloof. This time, he was having fun.

"We have infinite more presence now," says Tom Coster. "The harmonic structures between the guitar and keyboards hasn't changed since 1972. We've kept the Latin rhythmic construction. It's just that now we're supported by the people around us."

Santana will be touring the United States beginning in mid-January, and should not be missed. They are a powerfully good band.

It offers fringe benefits

Musicians dig B Ginnings

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

When Chicago drummer Danny Seraphine opened the B Ginnings nightclub in a Schaumburg shopping center two years ago, he was taking a gamble of sorts.

Surrounded by a Jewel Food Store and a House of Brides, the club's location seemed an unlikely mecca for the national and local bands he hoped to attract. But by installing a plush dressing room, theatrical lighting and an extensive sound system, he counted on the appeal of a showcase to lure nationals and keep the locals coming back.

So far, his gamble seems to be paying off. Seraphine's game plan of designing a nightclub expressly for musicians is still in operation, and B Ginnings' live music is holding its own against the popularity of discos and canned music.

ASK CLUB manager Dino Kolettis why groups like Rare Earth, Manfred Mann, Dion and Heartsfield (the national group Atlanta Rhythm Section appeared this week) journey to Schaumburg, and he'll tell you that a big part of the appeal is amenities.

"To many groups these days, a good stage and dressing room are almost more important than getting paid," says Kolettis. "Danny (Seraphine) started out just like these bands did, and he knows the rotten conditions many of them play under. It's a real selling point when the facilities are good, and it keeps bands coming back."

At B Ginnings, the selling points include a $50,000 sound system and extra lighting, but it's the $20,000 dressing room that really attracts performers, says Kolettis.

"AT MOST PLACES, bands change behind the beer cans or they get a kitchen or back room if they're lucky," he says. Not so at B Ginnings. The walls are paneled, mirrors surrounded by globe lighting, and band members can tune up before a set in soundproof quarters complete with phone and private bathroom.

Most old-time musicians would find B Ginnings' dressing room the cat's pajamas.

And while most major groups are writing the niceties into their contracts these days (Manfred Mann, Kolettis recalls, demanded yogurt after his appearances), many local nightclubs just aren't equipped to satisfy performers.

A majority of the bands that enjoy the B Ginnings fringe benefits are based in the Chicago area, he says, and their music ranges from country and western to mellow jazz. But the weekends are usually limited to disco or hard rock groups, reflecting the tastes of B Ginnings' 19-25 age clientele.

THAT CLIENTELE has become younger in the two years since B Ginnings opened, due in part to the lower drinking age but also to the fact that younger people have more going-out money than the over-30 crowd with children and mortgages, says Kolettis.

And while Schaumburg is no longer a mixture of vacant fields and shopping centers, "We still provide a place for these kids to go. The younger crowd doesn't want to drive into the city for their entertainment, and part of the appeal is that they don't have to dress to kill when they stay in the suburbs."

How does B Ginnings hold its own against the current craze for hustling to canned music?

THE MOONWALK notwithstanding, the interest in disco dancing to records has helped, not hurt, B Ginnings' business, says Kolettis.

"This is a concert club, and the primary reason people come here is to listen to a group," he says. "There's still an interest in live bands and original material, and people like the fact that they can sit 20 feet away instead of 150 yards in the stadium."

TV guest star pay down, actor finds other work

Ricardo Montalban is symptomatic of the change in TV in Hollywood.

"I used to make a good living out of being a TV guest star," he says. "I'd make six or seven guest appearances a year, at $10,000 or so each, and that was comfortable. Maybe not in Steve McQueen's class, but comfortable.

"Today, those six or seven guest appearances might net me, if I was lucky, $12,000 to $15,000 total. That's how much salaries have gone down. So I can't afford to make my living that way."

Rocardo Montalban

Instead, he does a lot of stage work (the pay may not be much, but it is constant), movie roles and, like many in Hollywood, keeps looking for a series of his own.

AT THE MOMENT, he's excited about two projects. He did a movie-for-TV called "Fantasy Island," which has series possibilities. It's about a man who runs a resort where he charges $50,000 for three days — but, for that money, he'll make your fantasies come true.

The second is a part he's doing on "Executive Suite." He was originally supposed to be killed off after four weeks, romancing Sharon Acker along the way, but now the producers have indicated that his death may be postponed. They are thinking of having the character stick around.

"They're both exciting," Montalban says, "not only because they're interesting, but because I find it exciting to be working. I'm the kind of person who grew up with the old ethic of doing a day's work for a day's pay. If I'm not working, I feel guilty."

Admission each Tuesday is $1.50 for the public, $1 for Museum members and students.

The exhibition of 150 photographs, presenting a vision of Chicago as seen by 22 image-makers, opens Saturday at the Museum.

Filming 'MacArthur' was toughest assignment he's had says director

by VERNON SCOTT

Director Joseph Sargent has completed filming "MacArthur," the most difficult task of his career, and wonders if he has painted an honest portrait of the controversial general.

After eight months of pre-production and principal photography, Sargent has doubts about his objectivity toward Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Before accepting the assignment from producer Frank McCarthy, Sargent was anti-MacArthur. So was Gregory Peck, who plays the title role.

In the beginning, therefore, Sargent fretted that his negative bias might creep into the film. By the end of production, like Peck, he had come to admire MacArthur.

"I'd say we wound up with a sympathetic portrait," Sargent said. "We've shown the warts as well as the good. But you really get to know the guy well.

"On any biographical picture it's difficult not to become empathetic toward the principal character.

"If you don't like the leading character, neither will the audience. And if the audience is unsympathetic toward the lead, it also becomes unsympathetic to the picture.

"MacArthur was a militarist by profession. I was in the service in World War II, and am an antiwar person. But it wasn't long before I got into MacArthur's inner life and saw his needs.

"It was his job to wage war. His only drive in this picture is to win two wars — the war in the Pacific and the Korean War.

"My concept of the picture is that of a man caught in the events that shaped his life, not mine. So I think we give him a fair shake.

"The first problem was to prevent the picture from being an historical documentary and to involve the audience with MacArthur, the man.

"I needed intimate scenes with the people around him. That was easy enough for historical figures with whom he had to deal. But it was another matter concerning his family.

"We couldn't use intimate scenes with his wife and son because we didn't get permission to portray them. We do portray both wife and son, but we had to be careful of invasion of privacy. It made it very tough for us.

"Then there was the danger of re-creating history. That is, to shape the facts to make a case for or against the man.

"The danger lies in factors other than just the corruption of facts. Until this generation of filmmakers we've made history very pretty through rose-colored filters.

"The old roseate techniques made all the war heroes good, upstanding figures. The enemy became villains, uncompromisingly evil."

Sargent also was bucking the ghost of "Patton," another McCarthy film. He hopes sufficient time has elapsed between the movies to avoid comparison with the hugely successful Patton film biography.

"MacArthur and Patton were very different kinds of men," he said. "But they did share a flair for showmanship. There's a reason for that. They were forced into public relations work to get the money to fight their wars. The first enemy was not Germany or Japan, but budget makers. They fought to get the manpower and machines to wage campaigns against the real enemy."

"MacArthur," begins at Corregidor and Bataan during the Japanese victories over American forces in 1942. It ends with the General's 1962 speech at West Point.

"Twenty years and two wars is a lot of territory to cover," Sargent said. "To keep the focus on the man himself, we couldn't afford to let the war scenes predominate."

Actor Peck went one step beyond Sargent's sympathetic attitude toward Douglas MacArthur. Peck, according to his director, became difficult to deal with from time to time during production.

"Greg identified so much with MacArthur he became schizoid," Sargent said. "It became kind of touchy sometimes when we talked over a scene.

"If we disagreed, Greg would take MacArthur's posture, drawing himself up just as MacArthur would. There was an imperative tone to his voice when he insisted on playing a scene a certain way. And he was usually right.

"Actually, Douglas MacArthur's life has all the elements of a classic tragedy. And I think we captured that."

'Rocky' written by its star

A worthy contender as fight-film

Review

by DAVID DUGAS

If you missed the Ali-Norton fight or, worse, didn't care who won, take heart. There is "Rocky."

Written by its star, Sylvester Stallone, and directed by John S. Avildsen, it is a worthy contender to the fight-movie tradition established with John Garfield's "Body and Soul" and Kirk Douglas' "Champion."

Stallone in his first starring screen role is a revelation as the self-styled "Italian Stallion," a Philadelphia boy who fights because, as he explains with borrowed glibness, "I can't sing or dance."

HE DOESN'T FIGHT very well. But when an injury suddenly deprives World Heavyweight Champ Apollo Creed of his title challenger, the promoters need somebody to climb in the ring and salvage the gate receipts.

Stallone is tagged as a local boy who probably can survive a respectable three rounds. He does better.

Talia Shire, memorable in "The Godfather," is moving as a mousy pet shop employe drawn into a love affair with Rocky. Burt Young performs strongly as her overbearing brother as does Burgess Meredith as Rocky's manager.

STALLONE REPORTEDLY turned down offers for his screenplay, awaiting producers who would give him a crack at the title role. Irwin Winkler and Robert Chartoff, Hollywood heavyweights accustomed to star casting, yielded.

Stallone, who looks like Rock Hudson sculptured from mashed potatoes, gives a dazzling performance in a film enhanced by his fine script, Avildsen's direction and James Crabe's crisp photography.

"Rocky" eschews the cliche knockout, triumphantly winning on points.

The film (121 minutes) is from United Artists and is rated PG.

Movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments, based on reports of the Independent Film Journal, for selected films of interest to readers.

"A Star Is Born" — The eternal show business classic, originally staring Janet Gaynor and Frederic March and later remade with Judy Garland and James Mason, surfaces for the third time, this time transposing Barbra Streisand and Kris Kristofferson into a Rock and Roll setting.

"Shaggy D.A." — In a sequel to the 1959 hit, a canine-inclined hero runs for District Attorney, but his campaign hits a snag when a magical ring that turns him into a sheep dog is found. Stars Dean Jones, Suzanne Pleshette, Tim Conway. (G).

"Silver Streak" — A comedy adventure set principally on a luxury train en route from Los Angeles to Chicago. Hostages are held aboard the train by racketeers engaged in an international art hoax. Stars Gene Wilder, Jill Clayburgh, Richard Pryor, Patrick McGoohan and Scatman Crothers. (PG).

"King Kong" — Multi-dollar remake of the 1933 "King Kong" classic, in which the giant ape commutes downtown from the Empire State Building to the twin towers of the World Trade Center. Stars Jeff Bridges, Charles Grodin and Jessica Lange. (PG)

"Network" — The quartet of award-caliber performances by Peter Finch, Faye Dunaway, Robert Duvall and William Holden is a whopping show in itself in this biting look at a television network, the cut throat tactics rampant behind-the-scenes and the questionable message delivered by the medium to its viewers. (R).

"Pink Panther Strikes Again" — Sequal to the bumbling inspector Clouseau's escapades chasing the most highly wanted jewel thief in Europe. Stars Peter Sellers, Leonard Rossiter, Herbert Lom, Colin Blakely. (G).

"The Big Bus" — Riotous comedy about a nuclear-powered bus and its zany passengers and crew spoofs cliche-ridden disaster films and features a first rate cast including Jose Ferrer, Joe Bologna, Lynn Redgrave, Sally Kellerman and Stockard Channing.

"Bugsy Malone" — Musical parody of the 1930s gangster films features an original musical score by Paul Williams and an all-juvenile cast.

"Carrie" — A repressed teenage girl, abused by her fanatically religious mother and heartlessly persecuted by her schoolmates, discovers she possesses destructive psychic powers and unleashes a furious vengence against her tormentors.

"Marathon Man" — A suspenseful and spine-chilling thriller about an athletic graduate student who becomes innocently embroiled in a murderous intrigue with a sadistic ex-Nazi has Dustin Hoffman and Laurence Olivier in the top roles.

Giant cow a restaurant landmark

The giant Fiberglas cow that has become a landmark in front of Uncle Andy's Cow Palace, Palatine, is a fitting testimony to the steak lover's paradise inside.

The restaurant, Northwest Highway at Quentin Road, offers lunch, dinner and late night entertainment with snacks in a comfortable and cozy setting. The dining room is open 11 a.m.

Featuring:
Uncle Andy's Cow Palace

to 11 p.m. daily; the Aztec Lounge provides entertainment 9:30 p.m. to 4 a.m. except Sunday and Monday.

Although the bar offers just about any alcoholic concoction, "The Greek Tragedy," $1.75, is a dynamite mix of Greek Ouzo, Metaxa and Galliano.

Every meal begins with a relish tray of fresh vegetables and salads, plus a choice of French onion soup, soup of the day or chilled tomato juice. Dinners also include tossed garden salad and a choice of potato.

Large Louisiana shrimp cocktail served with hot sauce, $2.75, makes a good appetizer, and either the house specialty Greek salad, $2.95, or the Cow Palace chef's slad, $3.75 is an ample pre-dinner treat when shared by two persons.

But, the best part of the meal is the entree.

THE COW PALACE roast prime rib of beef, $7.50, is the specialty of the house, served with natural juice that takes up almost the entire dinner plate.

Other cuts are New York strip sirloin, $8.25; filet mignon, $8.50; 22-ounce T-bone steak, $8.75; and U. S. choice top sirloin butt steak, $6.95.

The Cow Palaace also offers its own combination plate of broiled African lobster tail in butter and a petite filet mignon, $11.50; other seafood dinners and specialty plates of chicken, ribs and spaghetti.

Dinners are topped off with strawberry shortcake, Greek baklava with honey and nuts or other pastries — if you still have room.

THERE IS ALSO A special menu of hot sandwiches served after 9 p.m. that is perfect for a late-working couple.

The two-story home in which the restaurant is located was the Radio Club Farm from 1946 to 1958 and Campbell's Supper Club from 1958 to 1966. The house served as a grade school during the years of World War II.

John Bakos bought the restaurant 10 years ago after it had already gained a fine dining reputation as Uncle Andy's Cow Palace under a different owner. It had been named for the previous owner's uncle who was in a Chicago dairy business.

BAKOS HAS SINCE remodeled much of the restaurant and lounge and has changed the menu to specialize in beef dishes.

A large copper chandelier from Mexico, carved oakwood posts, comfortable leatherback chairs and a roaring fireplace make the restaurant a nice place to spend the evening.

What about the big Fiberglas cow outside the restaurant? A former owner had the cow specially manufactured for $4,000 in Sparta, Wis. "Ma Belle," a pet name for the animal, requires a washing down only once each year.

"It has become an important landmark out here with the fast development of this area. And it probably has a lot of memories for people in the suburbs who have come to know our restaurant," Bakos said.

Galen adds new pizzaz to keyboard standards

The management of the Arlington Park Hilton knew what they were doing when they booked pianist Galen for an extended run at the Top of the Hilton this year. His highly professional act deserves more than one appearance here if anyone's does.

To be sure, Galen's light blue leisure suit, broad winks at his audience and soft-spoken introductions to his arrangements are a far cry from the slick glamor and glitter of Liberace. Even so, his skill at the keyboard is just as memorable — and it's refreshing to see a nightclub act that starts with talent and sticks with it, avoiding the temptation to clutter the act with comedy.

Night out

Galen rarely leaves his instrument for long, and while he's there he handles everything from "Moonlight in Vermont" to Barry White's "Love Theme" with equal aplomb. The variety of his repertoire is notable, and even familiar nightclub standards like "People" and "Feelings" pick up new pizzaz under Galen's jumping fingers.

GALEN IS accompanied by conductor Dale Hetter on drums, Mark Janawak and Mike Piper on keyboard, Jim Treadwell on base, and Jeannette Buirke on the harp. As Galen demonstrates near the end of the show, they form a close team that enhances, but doesn't overpower, Galen's efforts at the keys. The group is particularly effective during a rendition of "Yellow Bird," when thanks to the sound effects you'd swear (or wish you'd been transported to the tropics.

From his emotional version of the theme from "The Young and the Restless" to the rip-roaring finale from "Jesus Christ Superstar," Galen is pure entertainment. He'll be at the Top of the Hilton through Feb. 26.

That master of the malapropism, comedian NORMAN CROSBY, entertains in the Blue Max of the Hyatt Regency O'Hare starting next Monday. Singer BOBBI JORDAN shares the billing with him through the 29th.

A popular television talk show guest, Crosby has developed a unique comedy style with his double talk. He wears a hearing aid, as the result of a wartime injury, and is not reluctant to joke about the fact both during personal appearances and in his charitable work with persons who have hearing problems.

There's been a change in the cast of "The Wiz," playing at the Shubert Theatre. KAMAL, known also as Kenneth Scott, took over the role of The Wiz earlier this week, replacing ANDRE DeSHIELDS, who has been with the show since its inception. DeShields is returning to the New York company of the award-winning musical.

Kamal, also in the broadway production, is a composer as well as actor-singer and a member of the pop-rock vocal group Au Natnral for which he has written many songs.

LINC'N BOUND, folksinging duo featuring Lynn Glaser, Des Plaines, and Dave Szczypinski, Chicago, will appear Sunday evening with autoharp and 6 and 12-string guitars at Sylvester's, 2700 N. Lincoln, Chicago. Lynn, daughter of the Howard Lewises, Des Plaines, is a '60 graduate of Maine West High School. Her husband is Glenn W. Glaser Jr.

Ask Andy

Rabbits swim only when necessary

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Mary Overmohle, 9, of Storm Lake, Iowa, for her question:

CAN RABBITS SWIM?

While gnawing is one of the rabbit's favorite pastimes, swimming is not. The furry creature would much rather spend his time on dry land. If called upon, however, he can indeed make an emergency swim that will get him across a creek and out of danger.

There is one variety of rabbit, however, that enjoys the water and spends a great deal of time in it. It's the swamp rabbit that can be found on river bottoms and swampy woods all the way from Georgia west to the middle of Texas and north to Oklahoma and Illinois.

Our friend the swamp rabbit dwells in swamps, marshes and low, brushy woods near the bayous, making trails that often lead through shallow water. They are excellent swimmers, and when chased by dogs they will swim back and forth across creeks.

Another relative who also enjoys the water is the marsh rabbit that makes his home in the lowlands along rivers and the coast of the Southeastern states from the Dismal Swamp in Virginia to Florida and west to Alabama.

The marsh rabbit is slightly larger than the average cottentail. It readily takes to the water.

In Florida and the adjacent coast islands and north along the east coast to San Mateo, another related rabbit is found: the Carolina swamp rabbit. He's the smallest of the swamp rabbits and is somewhat clumsy.

Still another relative is called the coast swamp rabbit. This fellow can be found only in a narrow belt of swamps and marshes along the Gulf coast from Mississippi through Louisiana to Matagorda Bay, Texas.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Rhonda Reinke, 8, of Tacoma, Wash., for her question:

WHAT IS AN IBIS?

The Sacred Ibis (one of the 28 species of heron-like, water-loving birds in the ibis and spoonbill family) once was venerated by man. In ancient Egypt, this dramatic bird stood next to the pharoahs.

These fine birds have short tails, stand about two and a half feet tall, have toes that are partially webbed and can be found in most of the tropical regions of the world. The ibis has a curved, slender bill and often a naked head while his close relative, the spoonbill, has a spatula-shaped bill — and feathers on top.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

McLean Stevenson show dropped

Lear difficult to please, pulls his new TV series

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The latest Norman Lear television series has closed out of town.

Maybe it was hexed or otherwise diabolically scuttled.

The show is — or was — "A Year At the Top," the story of a group of middle-aged entertainers who sell their souls to the Devil's daughter for a year at the top of show business. The stars included Mickey Rooney, Vivian Blaine and Alan Alda's father, Robert Alda.

IT WAS LEAR, not CBS, who pulled the show, as his statement reveals:

"We have asked the CBS television network to allow 'A Year At The Top' to shut down in Philadelphia for repairs and they have graciously granted us permission to do so. After alterations are made, we will be back in production in March for possible airing in the fall on CBS. We felt it would serve the show and the viewing audience better to close out of town and take the proper time to make what we feel are necessary changes."

A spokesman for Lear said the television impressario was dissatisfied with the two-and-a-half episodes of the half-hour comedy series so far in the can and decided to yank it.

CBS will put "The Jacksons," starring eight members of the musical Jackson family, into the Wednesday slot reserved for the Lear production, starting Jan. 26, 7:30 to 8 p.m.

NBC MEANTIME has decided to dump "The McLean Stevenson Show" and Danny Thomas' "The Practice," starting Feb. 9 "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams," starring Dan Haggerty, will be on from 7 to 8 p.m., appealing to the small-fry, followed by "Sirota's Court" and "CPO Sharkey," the Don Rickles survivor.

At 9 p.m. William Conrad will narrate a new suspense anthology. Television audiences remember Conrad as "Cannon," and if they go far enough back, as the radio Matt Dillon in the original "Gunsmoke."

ABC has three new entries for March, but no specific dates for their debuts. One will be the only doctor show left on television, except reruns of "Marcus Welby."

That's "Westside Medical" an hour-long dramatic series about three young doctors on the staff of Westside Memorial Hospital, who have their private practice across the street in a brownstone.

THE STARS ARE Linda Carlson, James Floyan and Ernest Thompson. How does ABC come up with such household names? Oh well, once only Mrs. Winkler had heard of her son Henry.

The other two new shows are "Eight is Enough" an hour-long comedy series starring Dick Van Patten and Diana Hyland as a contemporary couple raising eight kids, which is two more than "The Brady Bunch."

Finally, ABC has decided to go ahead with "Future Cop," starring Ernest Borgnine. The pilot received high ratings as a television movie last July. John Amos, who will be seen in "Roots," plays his black partner and John Haven plays a third member of the team — a "carefully programmed biosynthetic android prototype." That means he'll go Lee Majors one better and be a totally artificial man.

'Iron mask' a lovely TV movie

NEW YORK (UPI) — Richard Chamberlain went into the tube an insipid Dr. Kildare and has emerged as a superswashbuckler, as he proves in one of the most luxuriously lovely movies to be produced for television.

It is Alexandre Dumas' "The Man in the Iron Mask," and it was staged with a lavish hand, filmed in Europe, mostly at France's Chateau de Vaux le Vicomte, for movie release in Europe as well as for airing in this country on NBC, Jan. 17, 8 to 10 p.m.

The cast includes Chamberlain in the dual role of Louis XIV of France and his twin brother, Philippe; Patrick McGoohan as the handsomely evil Fouquet; Louis Jourdan as a D'Artagnan made all the more attractive by maturity; and Sir Ralph Richardson as Colbert, who steps off the pages of history with an almost mad intensity that is riveting. Jenny Agutter plays the love interest enchantingly.

NORMAN ROSEMONT'S production is opulent — the costumes look created, not rented, and are a splendid match for the fantastic shots of royal outdoor entertainments, with Oriental rugs on the ground and splendor all around.

The picture is just plain fun, and Chamberlain's enthusiasm for his swashbuckling role matches it.

"I love it," he said during an interview. "It's such a lot of fun. I must have a terrific romantic streak in me but I love fencing, riding horses, rescuing damsels in distress."

Chamberlain, whose "Count of Monte Cristo" received both good reviews and high ratings on television last year, currently is appearing in New York in a revival of Tennessee Williams "Night of the Iguana," and his Cinderella story, "The Slipper and the Rose," has been a big hit in movie houses, but he hasn't foresaken television.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Top play saves contract

We aren't going to tell you how to bid the North-South cards in today's hand. Suffice to say that when it was played in a recent pair game they were the only pair to land in six hearts. A few players didn't reach six, those who did, either played in six spades or the best contract of six notrump. Needless to say, all spade and notrump slams made easily.

When South did land in six hearts, East made a really hungry lead directing double. He knew he could ruff a spade. He knew his partner would respond to the double with a spade lead, but he also should have listened more carefully to the bidding and seen that North had been trying for a grand slam. Surely the lead directing double might cause his opponents to run out to six notrump.

If East had held back his double West would have opened a club or diamond. South would win in dummy and take the heart finesse, whereupon West would take his queen and probably shift to a spade as his only hope and South would be set.

Alfter the double, West dutifully opened a spade. East ruffed and led back a diamond. South won in dummy and thought a while.

Finally, South decided that East would not have doubled if he held four or five hearts to the queen so South decided his only chance would be to bank down his ace and king of hearts. He did this, dropped the queen and had a really lucky top score.

A Florida reader wants to know when it is proper to raise your partner's suit that he had bid in response to your takeout double.

The answer is any time you have four or more cards for him and enough general strength to want to go further. Of course, if he had bid diamonds or clubs you want to show a good heart or spade suit of your own.

JEFF VANYEK, the Wheeling Wildcats' all-arounder, scored 8.25 on the P-Bars and averaged 7.38 in all-around to lead his team to a 141.08 to 101.16 dual meet win over Palatine Thursday.

Minnesota Gophers still unbeaten, 83-69

Minnesota's nationally ranked basketball team stayed undefeated in 11 games this season with a victory over Illinois in Champaign Thursday night while Purdue moved its Big Ten record to 3-0 with a win over Iowa. Ohio State and Indiana were also winners Thursday night.

Mike Thompson and Osborne Lockhart combined for 44 points to lead ninth-ranked Minnesota to an 83-69 Big Ten victory over Illinois.

The teams played evenly in the first half, but free throws made the difference as Minnesota scored 10 to Illinois' two to take a 43-36 halftime lead. Minnesota then scored two quick baskets to open the second half and never were threatened, as they extended their lead to 20 with numerous fast breaks.

THE WIN GAVE unbeaten Minnesota an 11-0 recored for the season while Illinois dropped to a 9-6 mark.

Thompson scored 25 points and Lockhart 19 while Audie Matthews had 15 to lead Illinois.

Walter Jordan scored 24 points and 13th-ranked Purdue withstood Iowa's second-half rally for an 87-76 victory, the Boilermakers' third straight in Big Ten play.

Purdue, now 9-3 overall, also got 13 points from Joe Barry Carroll, and 11 each from Eugene Parker and Tom Scheffler.

BRUCE KING LED the 8-3 Hawkeyes with 21 points and Ron Lester had 20.

Center Tony Hall's tap-in with two seconds left gave Ohio State a 60-58 victory over Wisconsin, the Buckeyes' first Big Ten victory of the season.

The victory gave the Buckeyes a 1-2 conference record and 6-6 overall. Wisconsin dropped to 0-3 in the conference, 4-7 overall.

Guard Kevin Ransey led the Buckeyes with 18 points.

WISCONSIN FRESHMAN James "Stretch" Gregory, who scored 17 points, missed a turnaround jump shot at the buzzer.

Six-foot-11 senior Kent Benson scored 19 of his 32 points in the second half to help Indiana break up a tight game and score a 78-53 runaway victory over Northwestern's Wildcats.

Freshman forward Mike Woodson also scored 10 of his 14 points in the second half for the Hoosiers, who hiked their Big Ten record to 2-1.

NORTHWESTERN TRAILED only 32-30 at the half and 38-36 with 17:03 left in the game. Then Benson scored six of Indiana's next nine points while the Hoosiers surged into a 47-38 advantage.

Billy McKinney scored 18 points to lead Northwestern, now 1-2 in the league.

Crucial weekend ahead

Will Hoffman threaten in South title chase?

by ART MUGALIAN

The Hoffman Estates basketball team is facing a big weekend of double trouble, but coach Jerry Segebrecht and his Hawks welcome the opportunity.

An opportunity is exactly what Segebrecht calls his team's Friday-Saturday home-court doubleheader against Elk Grove, first, and then Prospect. The Hawks are 3-1 in the Mid-Suburban South, just a half-game behind Frontrunners Elk Grove and Rolling Meadows, both 4-1.

"Sure, playing two games on a weekend takes a lot out of you, both physically and mentally," said Segebrecht. "But they're both conference games so there won't be any trouble getting up for them.

"AND IF WE CAN win two this weekend, that'll give us four wins in a row and the confidence we need to start playing consistent ball."

The Hawks, led by 6-5 Joe Tully and 6-6 Ron Warring, have registered hard-fought victories over Conant and Maine North the last two times out. With a pair of wins this week and a little help from Forest View, Hoffman could move into the undisputed lead in the South Division.

Forest View visits Rolling Meadows tonight while Schaumburg (2-3) hosts Conant (0-4). The Prospect-Hoffman Estates game Saturday night is the only MSL South contest scheduled. All games are slated to begin at 8 p.m.

"Hoffman's size will be a problem for us," said Elk Grove coach Ken Grams, whose Grenadiers dropped their first league game Tuesday to Rolling Meadows. "We have trouble trying to stay even on the boards when the other team has one big man, and Hoffman has two of them."

ELK GROVE'S ONLY starter over 6-2 is senior Mark Smith, a 6-5 center, who is averaging 17.5 points per league game. His season low was 11 in the first game of the year when Hoffman Estates beat the Grens 48-39 in the Hoffman Thanksgiving Tourney.

"That was their first game and I'm sure they've improved a lot," said Segebrecht. "Of course, our team has improved as we've gone along, too. I think we match up pretty well with Elk Grove, but we have two big men and they have just one."

Elk Grove's zone defense will put a premium on Hoffman's outside shooting, especially from Doug Oslance and John Staback.

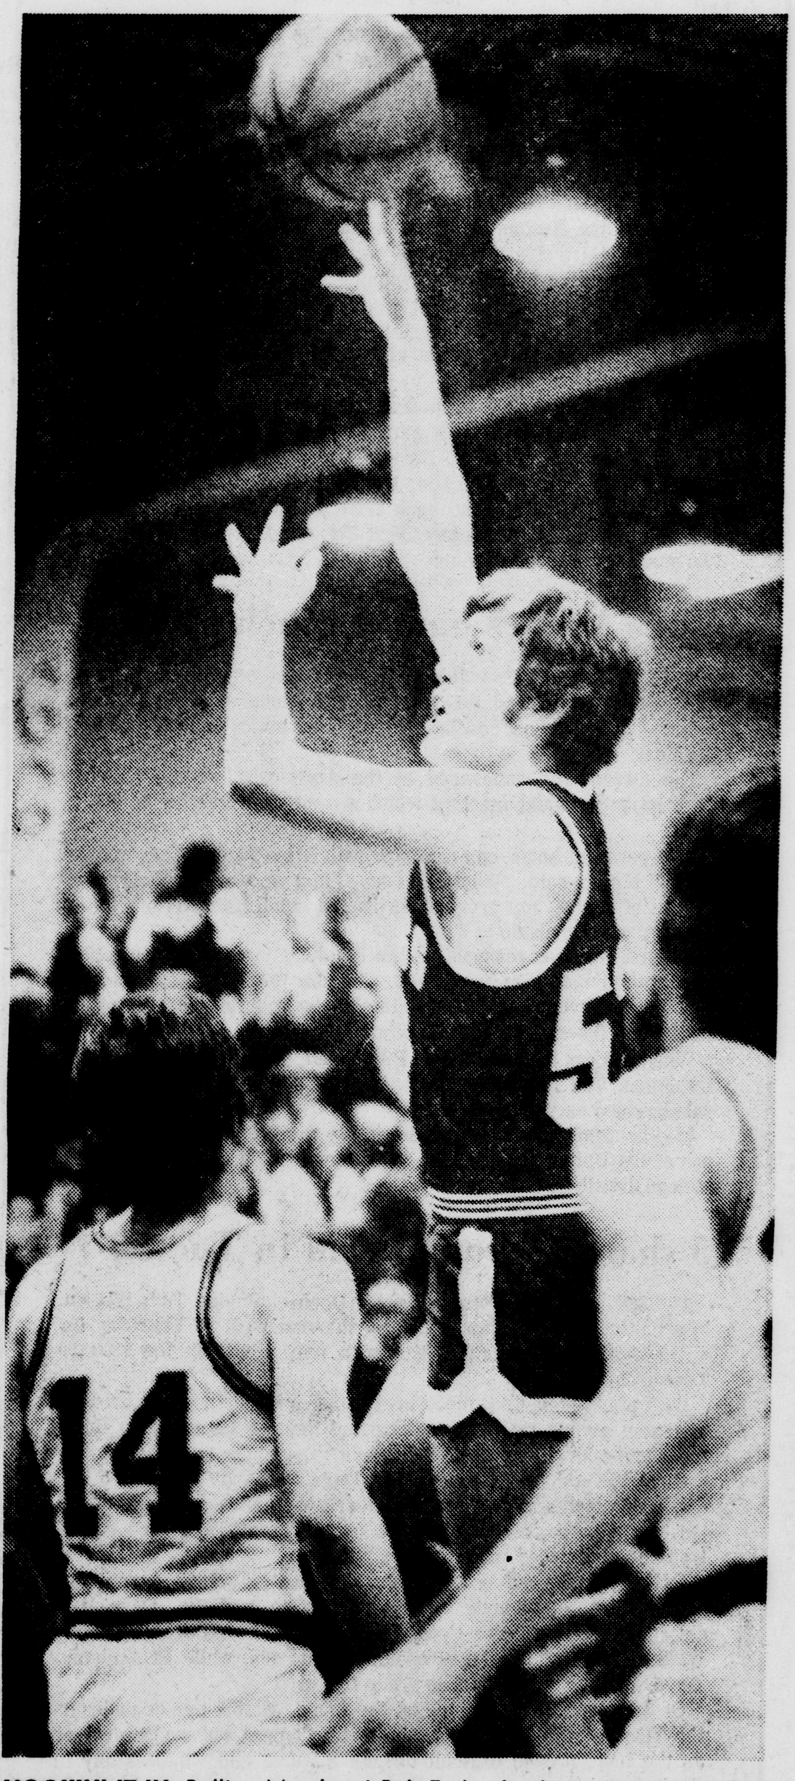

"We'll have to spread our offense out a little bit too," said Grams, "to keep them off the boards. We didn't do a very good job of rebounding against Rolling Meadows."

MEADOWS' MUSTANGS can grab at least a share of first place with a win over Forest View (1-3), who will probably be playing without the services of high-scoring 6-5 junior Bob Cameron, out with an injury.

"The win over Elk Grove was our best effort of the season," said a pleased Meadows coach Bill Weinberg. "We didn't do many things wrong — we put together four solid quarters."

Mustang center Kevin Kiley, though scoring just three points, did an excellent defensive job on Smith, who was "held" to 18 points. Weinberg

Multitudes worship pro golfer; bowler ignored

Bob Frisk
Sports Editor

It's a study in contrasts, a fascinating portrait of two sports and their roles in the commercial sweat industry.

The professional golfer strides across the sunlit meadows of the land, blond hair perfectly styled, wearing fashionably expensive clothes and packing a bulging wallet that grows larger with each birdie putt.

The multitudes worship the golfer. They envy him and then foolishly try to emulate him. Here just may be the ultimate status figure in the world of sport, the athlete who follows the sun in pursuit of his pot of gold. The jets land in Florida, Arizona, California.

THE PROFESSIONAL bowler drives around the country in a tasteful but not too gaudy automobile, maybe a van to help share expenses. Only a few thousand seem to know he even exists. Newsmen generally ignore him. Talk shows? Forget it.

The bowler has made great strides but still fights an image. Unfortunately, sportswriters have contributed to that image, and some refuse to change.

Syndicated columnist Jim Murray, writing Tuesday in The Herald, made some pointed observations about that image, and it was obvious he still carries memories of pinboys and dark, dusty establishments and chubby bowlers with "Klutz Construction Company" written on grease-stained shirts.

The grubby image has changed, television ratings are impressive, revenue is zooming, there is a legitimate superstar in Earl Anthony, but nobody seems to know about it.

YOU COULD READ all about the Phoenix Open golf tournament last weekend and see pictures of the leaders every day, but the first 1977 stop on the pro bowlers tour was buried. They did such a good job burying it I couldn't find any story Saturday. Or Sunday.

I had no idea Les Zikes of Palatine was even in the finals until alerted by another staffer who was watching on television.

This isn't unusual, even if the opener was held on the West Coast where time obviously is more of a headache for papers in the Midwest and East.

"Far more people bowl than play golf," pro bowler Don Johnson pointed out. "We don't get anything like the tremendous coverage golfers get. If we had one-fifth the space, we'd be happy. I just don't know what we have to do to capture the newspapers' imagination. In head-to-head ratings battles with golf tournaments, we've come out ahead. Some of those people who watch must read newspapers."

PART OF the problem may be the tour itself and its current structure. They normally don't finish a block of games until late in the evening, and morning newspapers fail to get the latest results by deadline.

They finish early on Saturday for the televised finals but fight numerous Saturday activities for Sunday sports space.

Bowling would do well to take a good look at its current format during the week and do something about the late finishes. That may not be the ultimate answer, but it would help the wire services who pump out the stories across the country. It would help the newspapermen who cover the events.

It has been suggested there is an economic reason for newspaper reluctance to promote the pro bowling tour. Since bowling houses are small, there is not that much room for spectators. Some 30,000 to 40,000 spectators daily watch the golfers.

THUS, THE PRINT media hates to plug what is essentially a television production, the tube being a competitor for advertising and all that.

I can't really buy that. It's still news, there are 40,000,000 bowlers in the country, and even those who knock down candle or duck pins, instead of ten pins, can associate with the pressure the best bowlers in the world face at the foul line.

Simplicity is one of bowling's prime virtues, and television's king-of-the-hill format for the finals does ensure drama, plain and simple. It begins with No. 4 and 5 qualifiers in the tourney squaring off, the winner then playing No. 3 — and so on until the No. 1 qualifier faces the lone survivor for the championship. Stories can be written to capture that same drama.

Bowling has gained itself a vast, almost subterranean acceptance despite the fact it lacks most of the ingredients that seem to be necessary for TV sport these days: an offense and a defense, physical contact, contract jumpers, lawyers, court cases, holdouts.

BUT THE PROBLEMS continue. The sport just can't manage the star status bowlers firmly believe it deserves.

Pro bowlers don't make the covers of big magazines and they don't get lavish endorsement money although it's improving. Earl Anthony is hardly a household name — to the chagrin of bowling devotees — although he dominates the sport as no other man before him.

Everyone seems to be waiting for just one of these bowling names to be taken in jest by a comedian. Then, surely the sport will have arrived.

Until then, the complaints appear justified. Bowlers feel the pain very deeply when they say dog show winners get better newspaper coverage.

Maine West meets East

The Maine West Warriors get back into Central Suburban League South division action tonight when they host the high-flying Main East Demons at 8:00.

Maine East comes in with a 12-3 record and is rated as one of the top teams in the area. Last week, the Demons of coach Paul McClelland knocked off touted Maine South to gain undisputed claim to first in the CSL South.

The Warriors, meanwhile, have been struggling through an up-and-down season, including a 55-45 loss to Glenbrook South last week. West now sports a 2-3 record in loop play and is 6-7 over-all.

Game time is about 8 p.m.

Bears hire Gillman to fire up offense

The Chicago Bears Thursday announced the hiring of veteran pro coach Sid Gillman as the team's offensive coordinator.

Gillman, 65, has been the head coach of the Los Angeles Rams, San Diego Chargers and Houston Oilers during his 18-year pro career.

"We're really fortunate to bring in a man of Sid's knowledge and experience," said Bears' coach Jack Pardee. "This sure won't be a case of 'on the job training.' Sid knows the personnel in the league and he knows the defenses."

Gillman's record as a pro head coach was 122-99-7 and included six championships. As a rookie pro coach in 1955, he led the Rams to the western division title of the National Football League. In 1957, Gillman's second round Rams draft choice was linebacker Pardee from Texas A&M.

Gillman left the Rams following the 1959 season to become head coach of the fledgling San Diego Chargers in the American Football League. His team won championships in five of the AFL's six seasons. After leaving San Diego in 1971, he served two years as head coach of the Houston Oilers.

A native of Minneapolis, he coached at Ohio State, Miami of Ohio, West Point and Denison before joining the pro ranks.

KC Kings rally to beat Golden St.

Richard Washington hit a jump shot from the free throw line with two seconds left Thursday night and Sam Lacey blocked two Rick Barry shots in the final minute to rally the Kansas City Kings to a 116-114 win over the Golden State Warriors.

Washington finished with 12 points and 13 rebounds while Ron Boone led the Kings, who have won four of their last five games, with 23 points. Brian Taylor had 22 points, 18 of which came in the second half.

Jamaal Wilkes led Golden State with 25 points and Phil Smith added 22. Rookie center Robert Parish had 20 points and nine rebounds.

The Kings raced to a 22-6 lead in the opening six minutes, but were unable to maintain the momentum and trailed 58-57 at the half.

Seven players scored in double figures as the Phoenix Suns hit their highest point total of the season in a 131-101 romp over the Detroit Pistons. Paul Westphal, with 25 points, led the Suns.

Bruins, Sabres skate to victory

Earl Anderson's rebound goal early in the third period Thursday night lifted the Boston Bruins to a 4-3 win over the Los Angeles Kings, their third straight victory.

Gregg Sheppard initiated the winning goal when he batted down an airborne puck and then fired it on Kings' goalie Gary Edwards, who made the save. But Anderson was stationed for the rebound and pushed it into the open net at 3:12. It was his sixth goal in 12 games.

Gary McAdam scored on a deflection of a Bill Hajt shot from the point with 1:36 left in the game to snap a 5-5 tie and lead the Buffalo Sabres to a wild 7-5 National Hockey League victory over the New York Rangers Thursday evening.

The Rangers had fought back from a 5-2 deficit in the third period on goals by Pat Hickey, Nick Fotiu and Ken Hodge, the last two goals 19 seconds apart.

Pitt's Majors named coach of year

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — Johnny Majors, who led Pittsburgh to an undefeated season and the national championship last year, was selected by his fellow coaches Thursday as major college Coach of the Year.

The award was announced at the American Football Coaches Association's annual meeting which wound up Thursday in Hollywood.

"No personal honor can compare with being named Coach of the Year," Majors said. "What can I say, I'm a very happy man.

"But of course, my greatest thrill as a team man was to win the national championship at Pitt."

Majors, who has resigned as the Panthers' head coach to return to his alma mater at Tennessee, said the 1976 Pitt team was the best he had ever coached and may be the best he will ever coach because of the current limit on scholarships.

When Majors took the job at Pittsburgh, he recruited "about 70" freshmen. The following year a limit of 30 per year and 95 total scholarships went into effect.

Majors' honor came in the university division, while Jim Dennison of the University of Akron was named coach of the year in the college division.

5 share 1st round lead in Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. — Former British Open champion Tom Watson, in a battle against darkness, shot a five-under-par 67 Thursday for a share of the first-round lead with four others in the $200,000 Tucson Open.

With play delayed by more than a half hour at the start because of frozen greens, 24 from the starting field of 153 failed to finish the round and will complete it Friday.

Gary McCord, Gil Morgan, Alan Tapie and Andy North also had 67s, while such stars as Johnny Miller, who has won this event the last three years, and U. S. Open champ Jerry Pate encountered trouble and finished with two-over 74s.

Craig Stadler had a 68, while Jim Dent, Tommy Aaron, Joe Inman, Rik Massengale and Jerry McGee had 69s. Dave Hill, George Archer, Charles Coody, Bruce Lietzke, Jeff Hewes, Bobby Wadkins and Art Wall had opening round 70s, while PGA champ Dave Stockton was in a large group tied at 71.

Of the players who completed the round, 38 shot par or under as the Tucson National Course, one of the longest but easier courses on the tour, proved difficult despite a warm and windless day in the Arizona desert.

Bison, Falcons in volleyball finals

Forest View and Buffalo Grove rang up impressive victories Thuursday to earn berths in district volleyball championship showdowns at two different sites on two different days.

The Falcons waltzed past Hersey, 20-5, 20-5 at Highland Park while the Bison trimmed Carmel in a see-saw battle at Libertyville 20-10, 14-20, 20-12. Maine West meanwhile dropped a 20-5, 20-14 verdict to the host Giants at Highland Park, setting the stage for a title bout between the Falcons and Parkers Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

BUFFALO GROVE will also move into a district title scrap against the hosts at Libertyville, Friday at 7:30 p.m., after knocking off the top-seeded Corsairs. "We had trouble with our serves in the second game," offered Bison coach Paula Von Gerichten, pointing out, "We played better than last night but we still haven't approached our regular season form again."

Denise Van Huele at Forest View credited her team's ability to sustain concentration and intensity for their 17th straight triumph. Later, the Warriors found Highland Park's scrappy play and ability to keep mistakes to a minimum overshadowing the all-around fine play of Debbie Meinke as Maine West finished up with a 4-13 mark.

WEST COACH Royleen Tipton a day earlier saw her club stop Arlington 20-8, 20-7 to advance to the semis behind the serving of Meinke, Carolyn Miller and Barb Klein. The setback had the Cardinals winding up their campaign with a 7-4 mark.

Another volleyball test Thursday had Schaumburg in the district finals at Elgin. Results of this contest were unavailable at presstime.

Wheeling gymnasts sky to 141.08

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Gymnastics Editor

The Wheeling Wildcats put the best Mid-Suburban League gymnastics score of the year on the board Thursday as they toppled the Palatine Pirates 141.08 to 101.16.

In other dual meets Elk Grove topped Prospect 127.11 to 101.54, Buffalo Grove handled Arlington 129.8 to 106.7, Hersey edged the Fremd Vikings by a score of 124.67 to 123.35, Rolling Meadows dealt on Schaumburg 130.43 to 93.76 and Forest View picked up a 111.24 to 80.98 dual meet win over Hoffman Estates.

For Dave Watters' Wildcats, the score was the highest point total ever by a Wheeling gymnastics team.

"It was just a case of a lot of hit routines," Watters said, "and not very many misses.

"WE'VE BEEN DOWN the last couple meets and we're just starting to pull it together."

The Wildcats might have gotten slightly higher had Joe Galow, a top still ring and high bar specialist, not hurt himself in warmups.

Jeff Vanyek, hitting a season high all-around total of 7.38, and Dino Manus' 6.11 all-around led the Wildcat effort.

The Wildcats also got solid performances from Jim Slepicka (free ex 7.55), and Jim Geske (side horse 8.1), Mike Spencer (tramp 7.65), and Jamie Wallace (still rings 8.4).

RON BAKKEN fashioned a 5.76 all-around for Palatine.

Doug (7.90) and Dave Smidl (6.80) topped the all-around for the Fremd Vikings but Hersey's superior team depth ruled their dual meet by a slim 1.32 points.

Doug Smidl's 8.55 on side horse was the highlight of his night and prompted Fremd coach Tom Potter to enthuse, "That was the most beautiful high school side horse routine I've ever seen."

JIM HUCK averaged 6.72 as the Huskies' all-arounder and got strong support from Tim Von Ebers (free ex, 7.65), Paul Brown (side horse, 5.6), Jeff Braddock (high bar, 6.3), and Bob Solomon (tramp, 7.4).

Rolling Meadows slipped somewhat to a 130.43 score but head coach Vic Avigliano isn't worried.

"We were missing (Troy) Winsell, our number three tramp man," Avigliano said, "and (Matt) Bicknase. (Mike) Illingworth also had a sore ankle."

Illingworth still won the all-around with a 7.03 average.

GLENN JOHNSON (tramp, 8.05), Mike Meyer (rings, 8.15), and Mike DiPiero (P-Bars, 7.95), were three of Meadows' strongest specialists.

Schaumburg's Steve Strohacker put together a 3.76 all-around average.

Buffalo Grove got a 7.2 and 6.96 from all-arounders Dewey Deal and Lee Battaglia respectively as they turned back Arlington.

Arlington got event titles from Dave Eitemiller on side horse (7.55) and Tom Staley on rings (8.3).

FRED BISTA (free ex, 7.45), Deal (high bar, 8.15 and P-Bars, 7.65) and Evan Jones (trampoline, 8.15) won the other event titles for the Bison.

Elk Grove slipped from their season high 129.85 but showed consistency with their 127.11 score against Prospect.

Bob Hamilton (5.61) and Dickie Allen (5.4) provided Elk Grove's all-around strength.

Don Bosslet (free ex, 8.0), Mike Peters (side horse, 7.65), Doug Phillips (P-Bars, 8.25) and Keith Rink (still rings, 7.95) won event titles for the Grens.

RON NORWELL'S 7.35 on trampoline and Tom Berkley's 6.6 on high bar won event titles for Prospect.

Forest View's Guy Hobart edged Hoffman's Phil Braverman 5.74 to 5.33 in their all-around race.

Dario Cruz' 8.25 on still rings was the highest score marked by the Falcons. Cruz, Jim Koetter (free ex, 7.65), Hobart (side horse, 4.75 and P-Bars, 7.5), Pat Lucansky (high bar, 6.3) and Dennis Curle (tramp, 6.65) won event titles for Forest View.

North teams face demanding slate

by ART MUGALIAN

"The time has come," the Walrus said, misquoting Lewis Carroll, "to talk of many things: of winning streaks and Sleigh Bells and dramatic turnarounds."

Those things and more will be among topics of conversation tonight and Saturday when the Mid-Suburban North basketball teams dive into their first weekend doubleheader of the young conference season.

TONIGHT'S SLATE finds Fremd (1-1) at Buffalo Grove (2-0), Wheeling (0-2) at Hersey (1-1, and Arlington (1-1) at Palatine (1-1). All games are set for approximately 8 p.m.

Saturday's showdowns will match Palatine at Fremd, Hersey at Buffalo Grove, and Wheeling at Arlington.

When the dust settles, 40 per cent of the North schedule will have been completed and division leader Buffalo Grove will either be well on its way toward a second straight North title or else Bison head coach Paul Grady will know the reason why.

The Bison have a 15-1 record and have rattled off 11 consecutive victories since Dec. 3 when Hoffman Estates dumped them, 54-53. The Bison were without all-stater Brian Allsmiller, who was resting his sore shins that night.

"WE'VE GOT SOME big conference games coming up," said Grady. "Fremd has a nice front line and they play very aggressive basketball. I'm sure they'll give us everything we could ask for."

Buffalo Grove received a balanced scoring effort led by Allsmiller's 20 points in a 91-61 crossover win over Schaumburg Tuesday.

"Buffalo Grove has a heck of a starting lineup, an excellent bench, and the great big man," said Fremd coach Mo Tharp. "We're going to have to play our best game of the season, and if we don't commit any turnovers and if we aren't intimidated by their presence, I thinkwe can beat them."

Except for the 6-8 Allsmiller, the Bison front line of 6-4 Fred Heesch and 6-3 junior Mike Marshall matches up fairly well with the Viking front wall of 6-4 starters Kerry Field, Dale Hallberg and Craig Rawlins.

THE BIG difference in the game could be Buffalo Grove's guards, Mike Ledna and Scott Groot.

"Our guards deserve all the credit in the world," said Grady. "Ledna and Groot really do the job, both on offense and defense."

Tharp welcomes the chance to play one of the state's top teams. Buffalo Grove is ranked eighth in one poll.

"Right now, they're number one," Tharp said. "But my feeling is that in order to be number one, you have to beat number one."

PALATINE HASN'T won a Sleigh Bells game with Arlington since 1964, but first-year Pirate coach Ed Molitor, while he isn't necessarily tradition-minded, sees a good opportunity to break that losing string. Molitor's team, 3-9 over-all, gave Buffalo Grove a tough battle before losing last week.

"Playing like we did against Buffalo Grove has got to give us confidence that we can play with the better teams," said Molitor. "What we need is a few wins to prove to ourselves that we can do it."

Arlington is 10-4, its only league loss also coming at the hands of Buffalo Grove. Coach George Zigman is especially concerned about Palatine since he will be without 6-3 senior Tom North, out with measles for the second straight week.

"Molitor has Palatine playing better defense than they ever have before," said Zigman. "It seems they always used to be offense-minded, but now he has them playing at both ends.

"THIS IS ALREADY a good rivalry," Zigman continued. "But the Sleigh Bells are a little added attraction. Our team seems to play better when there's something at stake, like in the holiday tournaments."

Palatine's Kevin McKenna (19.5) and Arlington's Dave Kamps (17) are the North Division's first and third leading scorers.

Wheeling's impressive 98-69 win over Prospect on Tuesday could signal a rebirth at the home of the Wildcats, now 2-11. The addition of Dan Larson to the lineup, along with regulars Brian Begrowicz, Jim Sabel and Keith Majkowski could spell success on the horizon for coach Ted Ecker's team.

"Beating Prospect gavs us a big lift," said Ecker, whose Wildcats always look forward to the Hersey rivalry. "I hope it can continue through this weekend."

Ecker expressed concern about Hersey's quickness, especially at guard where Joe Pusatera and T. R. Frye ply their trade.

"Hersey has good shooters and they're a pretty solid team," said the Wheeling coach. "We're similarly sized so quickness could be the key."

Designed to dampen the force of any sudden impacts, the hydraulic shock absorber works equally well whether being squeezed together or pulled apart. When the wheel travels over a bump, the lower cylinder moves with the wheel and is telescoped into the upper cylinder. A piston attached to the upper cylinder eases the telescoping action by plunging into thick fluid at the bottom of the pressure tube. The pressure slows the piston's motion and forces some fluid to flow upward through the compression valve and downward through the reservoir valve into the reservoir tubes.

Exodus of talent hurts

Viator swim coach looks ahead

by BOB GALLAS
Swimming Editor

For years St. Viator High School has produced swimming teams that were among the best in the state, so it's no doubt Ernie Buchanan was a little excited when he was promoted from assistant coach to head of the school's swim program last spring.

But things never worked out quite the way Buchanan planned.

Buchanan, an ex-Viator swimmer, got the job but didn't get the swimmers. He did face a mass exodus by Lion swimmers who scattered to a number of other schools.

BUCHANAN hasn't wasted any time feeling sorry about his situation, however, and has plunged ahead with the task of rebuilding.

"When I heard what was happening I called those involved and told them what I would be doing as coach in case they had any fears," said Buchanan. "The kids were faced with something new and untried compared to going elsewhere where maybe they knew a little more about what would be happening.

What Buchanan didn't say was perhaps a bigger reason for the exodus. Some felt betrayed that the coach that talked them into coming to St. Viator had suddenly decided to leave. "How long would this coach stay?" asked one swimmer.

"It was the hardest decision I ever had to make, but I had to think of my family," said Fleck, who took a job with High School Dist. 211 and is currently formulating the aquatics program for the district's five new pools.

Fleck didn't discuss salary but his pay was increased substantially, plus he is being reimbursed by the district for getting his master's degree.

BUCHANAN wasn't as successful as he would have liked. He lost 10 top swimmers who were either at the school or were planning to attend as freshmen this year.

The list of those who have departed is impressive. It includes:

• Mark Rohl — This former Viator swimmer has reached the finals of the state meet for the past two years and is now one of five ex-Lions to attend St. Charles High School. Rohl is ranked in the state's top 12 in four events, including third in the backstroke.

• Doug Peonski — Also at St. Charles, Doug has posted the best time in state this year in the backstroke with a time of 55.9. He's ranked fourth statewide in the individual medley.

• Dan Peonski — The brother of Doug, Dan is rated in the state's top 12 in four events, including second in both the butterfly and 100-yard freestyle. Dan, along with Rohl, were part of last year's Viator free relay team that took fifth in the state meet.

• Rusty Meyers — Another Lions who fled to St. Charles, which incidentally is coached by a former assistant to Don Watson, who's guided Hinsdale Central to 10 straight state swim titles.

Meyers has posted the fourth best time statewide so far this season in the 500-yard freestyle. Meyer's younger brother, Duncan, is also a promising future prospect at St. Charles.

• Tim Bird — Now at Elk Grove, Tim is third in the Mid-Suburban League in the butterfly and fourth in the IM.

• Mark Rusche — Went to Buffalo Grove High School and is sixth statewide in the breaststroke.

There are others, including freshman Glen Henry who opted for Dundee High School. Other freshmen who planned on riding to the school with other swimmers changed their plans when their "rides" transferred to other schools, according to Buchanan.

The exodus, for the most part, didn't have much to do with Buchanan's coaching style. At least one family had planned to move anyway after graduation, but moved the time up when Fleck left. Some transferred just to go with their swimmers and remain teammates.

"I CAN ONLY think of one case where the swimmer might have left because of dislike for me," said Buchanan, who still has several state caliber swimmers left, but will need a few years to rebuild Viator to its power status of before. "In some cases, those who left would have gone anyway because of financial reasons," said Buchanan, referring to his school's tuition.

"Sure it's affected us. You can't just take 10 kids out of a swimming program and not have anyone notice.

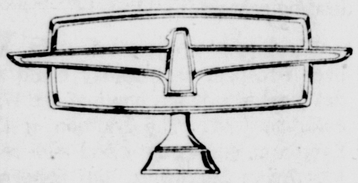

"Believe me, I'm not complaining. There have been many bright spots so far, like my assistant coach, Tom Gallagher who's been a big help.

"ONE THING that has happened is that there is more pressure on some swimmers who could have let up a little because of the talent that was ahead of them," said Buchanan. "Now they have to carry the load."

Despite the massive change in the Viator lineup, morale hasn't been a problem, Buchanan said. "When we started we didn't talk about the past, though there was some concern," he added.

"Looking at the past just woulnd't do us any good. All we can do is look ahead."

Judge dismisses teams as trial co-defendants

by ED SAINSBURY
UPI Sports Writer

U.S. District Judge Frank J. McGarr Thursday dismissed the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees as co-defendants in the $3.5 million damage suit by Charles O. Finley and the Oakland A's against baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

He gave attorneys for Kuhn and Finley 45 days to file final briefs in the case.

The taking of testimony ended Thursday after 15 days of trial in Chicago.

FINLEY'S SUIT had named the Red Sox as defendants to force them to pay $2 million and go through with a deal to buy Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers. The Yankees were named as a co-defendant to force them to go through with a deal to buy pitcher Vida Blue for $1.5 million.

Finley claimed Kuhn did not have the authority to veto the deals.

The Red Sox had asked to be dismissed from the suit at the end of the presentation of Finley's case. McGarr said earlier he would rule on the issue at the end of the trial.

McGARR DISMISSED the Yankees even though he acknowledged they may have not made such a request.

Finley's attorney, Neil Papiano, said he did not recall that the Yankees had asked to be dismissed. McGarr said, "They're out. If they want to get back in, it would amaze me. If they do, I'll hear them.

"It doesn't seem to me there is any cause maintained against them, and I want to limit the issues in this case," he said.

McGARR REFUSED to hear final oral arguments and ordered the attorneys to file simultaneous closing briefs and findings of fact on Feb. 28.

"After that, I'll decide the case as quickly as I can," he said.

Kuhn testified earlier no major league team complained about the sale before he voided it.

Under cross-examination Thursday, Kuhn testified he made an effort to attempt to tell Finley he would disapprove of the sale before he took the action.

He said he received advance information about the possibility of the sale from American League President Lee MacPhail.

Vikings lose fan

This letter is being written by a former Minnesota Vikings' football fan who is sick and tired of watching that team lose the big ones. How can any professional football team possibly be as unprepared for a big game as the Vikings were last Sunday for the Super Bowl?

Because the Vikings played as poorly as if they were playing the first game of the pre-season, I have to really wonder what they were doing for two weeks before the big game. Surely, they mustn't have been practicing.

I had a real fear in the first place that the Vikes weren't going to be able to compete with the Oakland Raiders, especially considering the fact that the Bears really should have beat the Vikings twice, instead of just once. But to not prepare for the big game, why that's a real crime.

So, in consequence, I am turning in my official Minnesota Vikings' fan button.

WHY WASTE TWO WEEKS?

Everybody complains about the two weeks between the AFC and NFC title games and the Super Bowl, but nobody does anything about it — until now. I propose that the time between games is shortened to a week (or less, if possible). First of all, there isn't anything going on in that time that needs to be done except all that pregame publicity. Don't tell me they need that. Second, I don't think the Vikings could have used a month to get ready for the Raiders, so one week would have been plenty. Meanwhile, while the players are sunning themselves and the weriters are trying to dig up all kinds of ridiculous stuff, the fans are losing interest in the game and the sport.

WILL DODGERS WIN?

Now that the Los Angeles Dodgers have obtained former Cub Rick Monday, I will predict that the Dodgers have already wrapped up the 1977 National League pennant and will meet the New York Yankees in the World Series. The Cubs? They'll finish sixth in the National League's Eastern Division.

Conant, Wheeling face stiff battles in wrestling

by KEITH REINHARD
Wrestling Editor

While the races are not actually wrapped up, Mid-Suburban League wrestling coaches are already paying lip service to a pair of champions while gunning for runnerup slots in the dual meet standings.

And those standings will solidify a step further tonight after another full round of divisional mat action.

Conant from the South and Wheeling out of the North are the consensus-proclaimed champs. The Cougars can put the cap on an undefeated division slate by getting past Schaumburg tonight.

IF CONANT should happen to lose however, and Elk Grove were to knock off visiting Hoffman Estates, it would throw the South lead into a deadlock.

"I hope our kids won't take Schaumburg lightly, even though we've beaten them once this season," observed Cougar coach Jim Cartwright. "If we wrestle as poorly as we did last Friday, this could just happen."

Cartwright and his opposing coach from the Saxons, Rick Gerz, have mixed up weight order by draw for their cross-town clash.

And watching the combat out of one eye will be the Hawks and Grenadiers. "Elk Grove will probably be a tougher team for us to wrestle than Conant was," noted Hoffman mentor Angie Testone. "They (the Grens) also have a strong lineup and it's much more balanced."

WHILE TESTONE, like most of the other coaches, concedes the crown to the Cougars, he feels there's still strong incentive for winning. "Second place is still up for grabs. The better we do now, the more points we'll take into the conference meet later."

Friday's other South Division battle sees Rolling Meadows visiting Forest View. Saturday Elk Grove will be at the Mustang corral and Hoffman will drop in on Prospect in conference action.

In the North it was Palatine giving Wheeling a boost and Buffalo Grove coach Dennis Riccio a case of deja vu by knocking off the Bison by a single point.

A YEAR AGO the Pirates triumphed over Buffalo Grove, and it was a one-point margin of victory at that time as well. And on both occasions, the Bison had sailed into the last bout owning a five-point bulge only to have Palatine win heavyweight by pin.

Wheeling will host defending champion Hersey tonight — a team they have yet to beat on the varsity mats.

ARLINGTON entertains Palatine tonight while Fremd hosts Buffalo Grove. "Wheeling sure has the inside track for first place," allowed Pirate pilot RichsPietrini, "But there are a number of other teams that could still grab second and at this point we consider ourselves one of them."

The Pirates will follow up Friday's dual meet with a tournament showing Saturday at Sycamore. Other teams entered in the affair are Naperville North, New Trier East, Savannah Wilmington, St. Charles and Glenbard South.

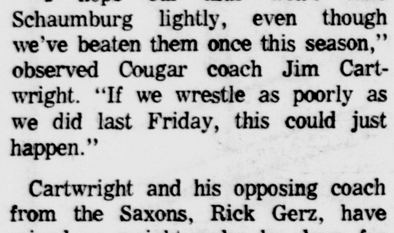

The Cougars and Saxons will also be tourney-bound tomorrow. They join with Crystal Lake, Eisenhower, Riverside-Brookfield and two East Leyden entries in a gathering hosted by the Eagles.

OTHER FRIDAY grappling competition has Niles West at Prospect, Maine West at Waukegan West and St. Pats at St. Viator.

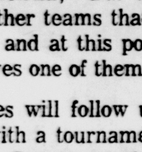

Tomorrow Buffalo Grove visits Hersey in another MSL North feature. Maine West will be at Niles West meanwhile for a Central Suburban League showdown and St. Viator treks to Round Lake while Wheeling plays a busy host to Holy Cross, Highland Park and Lake Forest.

What a way to lose

The highest single game match on television during a PBA tournament was the 299 to 268 triumph by Don Johnson over Dick Ritger in Akron in 1970. The highest single match, otherwise on the tour, was Bud Horn's perfect 300 game against Gary Dickinson's 289 in South Bend in 1971.

Pro Bowl team leads in Classic

The Pro Bowl Shop maintained its lead in the Junior Paddock Classic by taking five points from Beverly Lanes recently.

Louis Finkelburg (201-580), Terry Purcell (202-213-570) and Ed Warshawsky (504) led the winners, while the Beckman brothers, Kevin (223-553) and Mark (520), paced Beverly.

Rolling Meadows moved into second place by winning five points from Ten Pin Bowl. Joe Nagy (214-540) and Tony Puiaty (209-519) were high for the second-placers, and Ten Pin's aces were Jon Algrin (205-541) and Brad Zent (204-533).

Hoffman Lanes edged into the third spot after taking seven points from River Rand Bowl. Bill Geiersbach (235-203-210-648) rolled the high series for Hoffman.

Presently, Pro Bowl Shop leads the standings with 55 points, followed by Hoffman with 52, Beverly with 36, Rolling Meadows with 53, Ten Pin Bowl with 51 and River Rand Bowl with 26.

Do Minnesota opponents have right to object?

Loren Tate

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Tall, talented Mike Thompson, playing under a Minnesota court injunction, last season almost single-handedly destroyed the Illini basketball team.

Now he and teammates Dave Winey and Phil Saunders are back under a second restraining order (Thompson filed the first suit, the U. of Minnesota the second).

The situation has set legal minds to studying. Is there an opposite side to the case? Might Lou Henson or one of his athletes sue for the right to play against only those opponents who were fairly gathered and abiding by the same rules the Illini are forced to obey?

URBANA attorney Robert Auler, who has taken on more than one underdog case, sees court action as a possibility.

"It is the converse of the argument Minnesota used to gain its temporary restraining order," he claims. Using UI senior cager Tim Bushell as the mythical plaintiff, Auler says:

"Both from the standpoint of the old-fashioned property right under the contract he (Tim) agreed to, and from the newly developed 'important personal rights' to due process, he is being forced to play against people who are not obeying the same rules he is. Thompson has a right to due process, but the delay in obtaining that right should not interfere with another person's right to participate under the rules (NCAA) he agreed to. Implied in that agreement was the guarantee that all athletes participate under the same rules."

THERE IS NO question that Thompson sold tickets for considerably more than their face value. Such scalping is a violation of law AND the collegiate code. The university's complaint is that he was not given due process and that NCAA penalties were improperly administered and too harsh They accepted their two-year NCAA probation (making them ineligible for post-season basketball play) but are fighting for the eligibility of the three players in court.

The question today is: If Thompson, Saunders and Winey can continue to play under an injunction supplied by a friendly court in Minnesota, could affected athletes elsewhere acquire injunctions to prevent them from playing at other conference sites?

Auler says the determination of the legitimacy of the counter-case would be based on a court's ruling of how far Bushell's rights extend.

ONE WHO questions the likelihood is Robert Corley, former UI law professor and author now serving the U. of Georgia.

"There is the problem of whether an Illini athlete has a 'standing to sue' in such a case," says Corley. "This is always a consideration in any suit. There must be an aggrieved party who is adversely affected.

"The court would have to decide whether Bushell has sufficient standing to challenge the issues between Minnesota and the NCAA. I doubt that he does."

Corley continued:

"THERE IS A clause in the constitution stating that a decision of the court in one state has full faith and credit in other states. The courts in Illinois, with a few special exceptions, are bound to accept decisions of courts in Minnesota.

"There is the additional problem of bonding. When a party asks for a temporary injunction, he must put up bond to cover damage to the other party in case he loses.

"Minnesota's case is stronger because the right of a player to participate is given more weight and protection by the court than the right of a player to prevent another from participating. Some rights are more important than others."

Corley adds that since the case occurred in Minnesota, it would be difficult to assemble the necessary material and people here for a court to make a proper judgment.

BGRA to meet Tuesday

Aaron the SF leader too

Not only is Henry Aaron the all-time homer king, but Hammerin' Hank can also lay claim to the major league career lead in sacrifice flies. Aaron had 119 of them prior to the start of the 1976 season.

Hoffman faces double trouble

also got good performances from Bob Rose, Kent Walker and Bob Furlan.

"This will be a good game," said Weinberg. "Whenever Rolling Meadows and Forest View get together, it's a real dogfight."

THE CONANT-SCHAUMBURG cross - town rivalry resumes with Conant still looking for its first win of the season after 10 losses. The last time the two teams met, last March, the Cougars won by a point in overtime in the regional final at Hoffman High.

This year both the Cougars and the Saxons are rebuilding with plenty of sophomores and juniors. The Cougars' strength is a pair of veteran seniors at guard, Rob Totten and Dave Plumb, each averaging about 12 points a game in league play.

Schaumburg's John Chmiel, the MSL's top scorer with a 24-point average, leads the Saxons. John Moran, like Chmiel a junior, owns a 12-point average and is the team's second leading rebounder behind Chmiel.

"Schaumburg plays such a tight zone and Chmiel dominates the middle pretty well," said Conant coach Dick Redlinger, "so I think we'll probably go with our shooters."

Cubs to try basketball

Bill Madlock will put his National League-leading batting average on the line — the free throw line — when a team of Chicago Cubs challenges a band of local coaches in a basketball contest at Prospect High School, Wednesday, Jan. 19 at 8 p.m.

Madlock will be joined by Ray Burris, Joe Wallis, Jose Cardenal, Rick Reuschel and others against a squad comprised of Forest View football coach Fred Lussow, St. Viator basketball coach Ron Crieger, Prospect assistant cage coach Casey Rush, former Prospect star Bill Zadel and Chicago White Sox pitcher Larry Monroe.

The Cubs, coached by former Los Angeles Rams defensive end Gregg Schumacher, will be on hand after the game for an autograph session at which time fans can personally meet them, obtain autographs and take pictures.

Tickets are $2 and may be purchased at the door or at Cunningham-Reilly Sporting Goods, Arlington Heights Federal Savings & Loan Assn., Mount Prospect State Bank, Pro Sport Center, The Sports Chalet at Randhurst and For Men Only at Countryside Mall.

For more information, call 259-8325.

Block(815)buster

The top three-game series on the PBA tour was the magnificent 815 by Jim Stefanich at the Denver in 1975. "Steffy" shot games of 258, 278 and 279 for the remarkable achievement. But Billy Hardwick owns the top four-game high with a 1082 block off super games of 267, 279, 247 and 289. That feat came in Redwood City, Calif., in 1969.

Facelift planned for nation's main street

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter will ride to his inauguration in a gleaming limousine down a derelict street.

Pennsylvania Avenue — "the Avenue of Presidents," connecting the White House and the Capitol — has been getting seedier for years.

The mile-long street which Pierre L'Enfant envisioned as America's Champs d'Elysses — paraded down by armies returning from war, crept along by caissons bearing martyred presidents — is noisy, shabby, rundown.

ON INAUGURATION Day, Carter and co-passenger Gerald Ford will pass three liquor stores, half a dozen fast-food restaurants, some parking lots, and a souvenir shop offering "fireworks, magic tricks, jokes."

Two blocks from the White House, they will go by the Occidental Restaurant, "where statesmen meet to eat," and its neighbor, the old Willard Hotel, "The residence of Presidents."

Both are boarded-up and defaced by the droppings of starlings who roost noisily on their facades every spring.

The Occidental went broke years ago after a disgruntled waiter was found to be serving tainted food to patrons.

THE WILLARD closed in 1968 and is the centerpiece of a never-ending court fight between its owner, who wanted to tear it down, and the government, which wants to preserve it as an example of Beaux Arts architecture.

Further down Pennsylvania is a photo shop where Civil War photographer Matthew Brady kept his studio.

Another building housing a servicemen's canteen once served as a Ford Motor Co. assembly plant. The curly Ford "logo" still can be seen over the door.

The gracious Evening Star building, built in 1898, is occupied by military recruiters.

A STONE cupola given to the capital as a monument to temperance by a San Francisco doctor, decorates one corner. Atop it stands a carved crane on graceful thin legs. There's a statue of Benjamin Franklin somewhere else and a mounted Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock on another corner.

Across the street stands a simple stone marker in a patch of grass — the capital's only monument to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Also on the South Side are the long, solid walls of government buildings — the District Building, the Internal Revenue Service, the Justice Dept. and the Federal Trade Commission.

Architect John Woodbridge walks down Pennsylvania Avenue every morning from his home on Capitol Hill to his office.

"THIS STREET is a disgrace!" he exclaims. He shakes his head. "Imagine! 'The nation's main street.' "

For 15 years Woodbridge has been involved in efforts to revitalize the avenue.

He heads the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corp., created by Congress in 1972 to meld government and private money into a resurrection of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Earlier an advisory panel appointed by John F. Kennedy came up with a grandiose plan for a 50-foot wide, mile-long swath of trees and walkways culminating in a huge "National Square" covering two city blocks. Attacked as "Mussolini-style" architecture, it was never built.

PRESERVATION IS the keynote of the new, more modest revitalization plan. It calls for $130 million in public money and $350 million in private investment "to turn the avenue into the lively urban space it was meant to be."

The Willard would reopen with a subsidy, the only way it could operate economically. There would be shops, offices and 1,500 apartments, all neighbors. The street would no longer empty when night falls.

One block would consist of buildings bearing interesting old facades lifted from other downtown buildings and moved intact. Special paving and a great, green band of trees would tie it all together.

"We want a unified and lively street," says Woodbridge, "not a monument."

WOODBRIDGE envisions constructing shops in the barricade-like blank wall of the new FBI Building, an austere structure which some critics call a national disaster.

But Congress has been slow to appropriate the money. "We don't have a constituency," says Woodbridge.

L'Enfant wanted a city where you could look down broad boulevards from one monumental landmark to another. It was never realized.

Andrew Jackson built the Treasury in a place where, as it expanded over 30 years, it blocked the view of the Capitol from the White House.

THE LEGEND is that Jackson, feuding with Congress, stomped out of the White House one day and said "Put it there!" because he no longer wanted to set eyes on the Capitol.

In the Civil War, prostitutes lived nearby to accommodate the troops commanded by Gen. Joseph Hooker — thus the term "hookers."

There was once a big central market where the National Archives stand. Street cars ran down the avenue. Pennsylvania Avenue was a street of shops and boarding houses.

In the 1930s government buildings were erected along the South Side and the avenue became the edge, not the center of the business district. That's when decline set in.

ON INAUGURATION DAY, Jimmy Carter will pass down Pennsylvania Avenue, "The Avenue of Presidents," connecting the White House and the Capitol. Pennsylvania Avenue has become rundown, noisy and shabby with boarded-up buildings, liquor stores, parking lots and souvenir shops.

Chinese characters making a comeback

TOKYO (UPI) — Using his country's simple alphabet, a Japanese child can write "Kutsu," the Japanese word for "shoe," with two strokes of a pen.

But it will be harder this year. By government decree, the proper way to write "shoe" will be with a complicated Chinese character that requires 12 pen strokes.

China's age-old way of writing with picture-like symbols, which most Americans and Euorpeans see only on Chinese restaurant menus, is making a comeback.

PREDICTIONS after World War II that written Chinese was headed for the graveyard of dead scripts such as Egyptian hieroglyphics so far have not come true.

Chinese characters today remain the tool of higher literacy for close to one billion people living in China, Japan, the two Koreas, Taiwan and parts of Southeast Asia. More people write with them than the combined populations of North America and Europe.

In Asia's vast zone of Chinese culture, the Chinese writing system has been ousted only in Vietnam, where the Western alphabet was substituted during French rule.

In South Korea, where the language is written with a combination of Chinese symbols and a native alphabet, an official attempt to get rid of Chinese and rely only on the alphabet was dropped in 1972.

"Knowing Chinese characters is essential to better understanding of the Chinese culture which encompasses China, Japan and Korea," said Shim Chang-yu, the South Korean education minister at the time. Now high school graduates are expected to know 1,800 of them.

IN JAPAN, a post World War II trend to restrict use of Chinese symbols, which the Japanese call "kanji," has just been reversed.

The government's Advisory Council on the Japanese Language recommended that the list of Chinese characters permitted in daily newspapers be extended to 1,900. It had been held to 1,850 since 1948, when a reform of the written language was carried out. A high school graduate will be expected to know all 1,900.

The council's recommendation is expected to prevail. It will restore complicated Chinese characters for words such as "shoe," "umbrella," and "soup" that could be written with far less effort in the alphabet.

Strangely, Japanese seem to prefer it that way.

"The connection between words and symbols is very strong among our people," said Tokyo's Yomiuri newspaper in a comment on the decision.

TO JAPANESE, "shoe" written in the alphabet simply does not look like a "real" word. "Shoe" written with a Chinese symbol does.

Even when Chinese symbols were banished from school books and newspapers, people went right on learning them and using them.

Even such essential communications as labels on Japanese medicines often employed Chinese symbols that children theoretically were not taught in elementary and high school.

In North Korea, students going through the 10th grade are taught only the Korean alphabet, and Chinese symbols are not used in the press. However, all children selected for higher education are required to master Chinese writing.

CHINA ITSELF has experimented with writing its language in Western letters and a Chinese alphabet during the Communist rule that started in 1949.

Because of the country's wide variety of dialects, Chinese in Peking, Canton, Shanghai and other important cities cannot understand each other's speech.

The picture script enables them to communicate by writing. It is sure to be retained until some day a long way off when Chinese speak a common language.

Pollution control talk set

by LEA TONKIN

Pollution cleanup can save industry money and a conference Monday and Tuesday at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare hotel, Rosemont, will focus on that topic.

U.S. Commerce Sec. Elliott Richardson and federal Environmental Protection Agency chief Russell Train will speak at the conference, entitled "Beyond environmental regulations: industry takes initiatives." Resource recovery, research and plant operations will be discussion topics.

"We have found that if industry can design their equipment so it doesn't pollute, they can save on energy costs, and possibly make a profit from former waste products," said George Alexander Jr., regional administrator for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in Chicago, one of the conference sponsors.

The U.S. Dept. of Commerce, the state chamber of commerce and manufacturing associations in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio and Minnesota also are sponsors of the gathering. Corporate sponsors include Commonwealth Edison Co., Eli Lilly, Dow Chemical, Hydroscience, Republic Steel Corp., 3M and St. Regis Paper Co.

Pollution control programs designed to conserve money as well as resources will be outlined the first day of the conference. Specific technical programs will be discussed Tuesday.

THE 465-FOOT tanker "Amoco Indiana" steams into Grand Traverse Bay, Mich., after the Coast Guard cutter Sundew freed her from the shoals off the tip of the Leelanau Peninsula. The ship floated off the shoal after 5,000 gallons of fuel oil was pumped to a sister ship.
